LINDBERGH NAMED TO ARMY PLANE QUIZ

A. T. & T. Hits Wire Control Bill as Peril To Service

Gifford Cites Investors' Righst and Attacks Public Rule.

Will Fight Plans "To Full Extent"

RCA Supports Measure Only as to President's Proposals.

America's largest corporation, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., went into action yesterday in opposition to the bill proposing consolidated communication systems under a Federal commission, when Walter S. Gifford, president, declared his concern "must oppose to the full extent of our ability the passage of this measure."

Joining him in opposition was David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, who asked that Congress confine the provisions of the measure to President Roosevelt's recommendations. He said his company was favorable to the President's proposal, but would oppose going beyond his plan.

R. B. White, president of the Western Union Telegraph Co., told the committee that his company could adjust its practices to conform to the provisions of the bill without much difficulty, but he urged a provision to protect the company from labor disputes.

Hits Bureaucratic Aims.

Gifford described the organization of the Bell telephone system and added that, "By giving the proposed commission power over all transactions the present decentralized and adaptable operation will be transformed into a rigid, centralized, bureaucratic operation.

"This," he added, "will devitalize the very principles of management which have been mainly responsible for the progress of telephony in this country.

"This bill proposes to so largely place the power to manage in the commission as to set up a regime of public management of private property. Of the 681,000 stockholders who own this property, the overwhelming majority are women and men of small means who have invested their savings in this business. To most of them this investment is vital. As trustees responsible for good telephone service to the Nation and responsible for the safety of the investment of these hundreds of thousands of people, we must oppose to the full extent of our ability the passage of this measure."

Gifford said that in the opinion of his company the telephone business is now sufficiently regulated.

"There has been no evidence that any change is necessary," he said.

In an analysis of some of the sections of the bill, Gifford points out that under a strict interpretation even a single telephone could not be connected without first obtaining

$16,000 Blaze Razes Church

St. Peter Clavier's Burns Despite Hard Fight at Ridge, Md.

Leonardtown, Md., March 13 (Spl.).—St. Peter Clavier's Roman Catholic Church, located at Ridge, 22 miles from here, was destroyed by fire early today.

The fire was discovered at 12:30 a. m. by the Rev. Horace McKenna, rector of the church, who had quarters in the rear of the building, which was valued at $16,000.

Father McKenna tried to save the sacrament when the roar of the flames aroused him, but was driven back twice by smoke. Other valuable relics were lost, including some bones of St. Peter Clavier and Blessed Charles Lunga, a martyred African missionary. Valuable golden vessels on the altar also were lost.

The Leonardtown volunteer firemen answered the call, making the 22-mile run in 25 minutes.

The frame building was a mass of flames in a high wind and it was impossible to check them when the firemen arrived. Other buildings close by were saved by hard work by the firemen and 20 boys from Cardinal Gibbons Institute nearby. A school conducted by colored sisters and a hall that will be used for services were saved.

The church is one of the oldest and largest colored Catholic churches in southern Maryland and was established as a mission in 1902. The burned structure was built in 1912, by the Rev. Abraham Emmerick. White priests are in charge.

Strewl Gets 50 Years In O'Connell Case

Note-Writing Go-Between Calm as Jurors Read Verdict; Sentence to Be Pronounced Friday; Mother Unemotional.

Albany, March 13 (AP).—Manny Strewl was convicted tonight of the charge of kidnaping Lieut. John J. O'Connell, jr., nephew of the powerful up-State political leader, last July.

Sentence was deferred until Friday. Because of his criminal record, Strewl will receive the maximum penalty, 50 years' imprisonment.

The jury deliberated only three hours. The first ballot was 11 to 1 for guilty.

Strewl received the verdict calmly, as did his widowed mother, who sat between her two other sons, Jacob and Morris.

Daniel H. Prior, defense counsel, asked a poll of the jury. Each answered to his name with the one word, "Guilty."

None of the O'Connell family was in court when the verdict was returned.

Strewl, go-between in ransom negotiations, was accused of writing the ransom letters which he purported to receive from the gang.

Strewl, hands in pocket, faced Judge Earl H. Gallup as he answered questions of the clerk regarding his life. His voice was somewhat higher-pitched than usually.

There was no demonstration.

Strewl said he was 30, single, and gave his occupation as clerk. He said he had twice before been convicted of law voilations, once in 1922 for breaking a Federal interstate commeree commission law, and in 1929, for impersonating a Federal officer. For those offenses he served two terms at Atlanta Federal prison.

Ford Restores $5 Minimum As Daily Pay

Raise Will Boost Annual Pay Roll $6,000,000, It Is Estimated.

Detroit, March 13 (AP).—The $5-a-day minimum wage with which Henry Ford startled industry in 1914 came back today.

"No one loses anything by raising wages as soon as he is able; it has always paid us," Ford said in announcing the $5 minimum, effective today.

Forty-seven thousand of the 70,000 men employed by the Ford company throughout the United States benefited. They had been receiving $4 and $4.40 a day. It was estimated, unofficially, the raise would add $6,000,000 to the company's annual pay roll.

It was the first blanket increase since the minimum wage rate of $6 a day, prevailing in December, 1929, was increased to $7 in what the company described as its contribution to check the depression, then just beginning. That rate was maintained 22 months.

Other Manufacturers Confer.

Today's announcement came on the eve of a conference of employers and employes in some other automobile factories with the National Labor Board in Washington on demands of the automobile workers Federal Labor Union for a 20 per cent wage increase and shorter working hours. The Ford company has consistently refused to sign the NRA automobile code, which virtually all other large manufacturers have accepted. Henry Ford has contended the code lends itself to unionization of automobile plants, and that he has done more for his employes than they could have gained through organization.

In announcing today's increase, Henry Ford commented that "low wages are the most costly any employer can pay."

"It's like using low-grade material—the waste makes it very expensive in the end," he continued. "There's no economy in cheap labor or cheap material.

Small Increases in February.

"The hardest thing I ever had to do was to reduce wages. I think we were the last big company to come to it. Now I am mighty glad wages are climbing again."

During February, the company's announcement said, 17,000 men received small wage increases, but upon Henry Ford's return to Dearborn late last week, he began to put into effect the plan that had been in his mind for some time.

Ford executives issued a warning against men flocking to Detroit in search of employment.

"This is not a call for workers," they said. "Plenty of Detroit automobile employes still are out of work. We must take care of them first."

Ford employes received the announcement with enthusiasm. All

Aid of Touhy Gets 99 Years In Factor Case

Banghart, 'The Owl,' Given Quick Verdict by Chicago Jury.

Chicago, March 13 (AP).—Basil (The Owl) Banghart was convicted tonight of a part in the John Factor kidnaping and sentenced to 99 years in prison.

The verdict came shortly after another Touhy gangster—Charles (Ice Wagon) Connors—was found shot to death, apparently the victim of gang vengeance.

The quick verdict of the jury marked the speed attending the entire trial. The jury retired at 3:51 p. m. and gave its verdict at 5:07 p. m. The case itself consumed only a week in the courtroom.

While the State had asked either for the death penalty or the 99-year sentence, prosecutors expressed themselves pleased at the sentence.

Abduction Sentences.

Already Roger Touhy, leader of the Chicago gang, Albert (Polly Nose) Kator and Gustave Shaefer are serving similar sentences for the abduction. They were convicted a few weeks ago in a trial that started two days after Banghart and Isaac Costner, another member of the mob, were captured with two women in Baltimore.

Costner turned State's evidence and in the two trials pointed out members of the Touhy gang as the plotters in the Factor case.

Factor pointed to Banghart as one of the several men who stopped his automobile as he left the Dells, suburban roadhouse, last July with friends and forced him and Al Epstein, his attorney, into a machine-gun guarded automobile. Epstein later was released, but Factor was kept prisoner 12 days in a nearby farmhouse.

Ransom Note to Wife.

It was Banghart, Factor said, who carried one ransom note to his wife, Rella. Two policemen identified Banghart as one of the two men who escaped an elaborate police

Elsie Ferguson Plans Fourth Trip to Altar

London, March 13 (AP).—Elsie Ferguson, American actress, plans to marry soon for the fourth time, it was revealed today. Notice of her forthcoming marriage to Victor Augustus Seymour Egan, wealthy Irishman, who has lived in London for a number of years, was filed at the Caxton register office.

Miss Ferguson, who gave her age as 49, said later she had "left the stage for good." It will be the second marriage for Egan, whose age was given as 59.

Kaiser, 'Broke,' May Return To Germany, Nazis Willing

Doorn, Holland, March 13 (AP).—The return of former Kaiser Wilhelm from exile to Germany was viewed as a possibility today, following a Hohenzollern family council.

Financial difficulties confronting the royal family as a result of the German government's ban on the export of money from Germany except in exchange for goods were understood to be the main topic at the parley.

Under the circumstances, it was said, his return to his native land after nearly 16 years of absence was not impossible.

At the conference were Wilhelm, his wife, Princess Hermine; the former monarch's two sons, Prince Eitel Frederick and Prince August Wilhelm, and several generals, advisers to the kaiser.

Hitherto, the Hohenzollerns have received incomes from various German sources, but it was reported that the Hitler regime is unwilling to make an exception in the money export ban in the case of Wilhelm.

Monarchists have been busy in Berlin, but talk of a possible Hohenzollern restoration was vigorously suppressed by Nazis on the occasion recently of the former emperor's seventy-fifth birthday.

The former Kaiser was quoted last year as saying Hitler's accession to power was a step "in the right direction," but that he would return to Germany only if asked.

U. S. Enters Rum Trade On Islands

Experiment on Virgin Territory Aims at Rehabilitation.

Will Be Initial Step in Further Business Operations.

An experiment that will place the Government in the West Indian rum manufacturing business as a step toward economic rehabilitation of the Virgin Islands is about to be opened, it was disclosed yesterday.

With $1,000,000 capital provided by the Public Works Administration, a Government monopoly on all Virgin Island industry will be created. This is to be accomplished by the creation of a corporation, to be known as the Virgin Islands Co., which will operate sugar plantations and produce Virgin Island rum.

The experiment is expected practically to convert the islands, neighbors of Puerto Rico, into a proving ground for testing a program of Government participation in business.

Announcement that the PWA was providing $1,000,000 "to reestablish certain agricultural and industrial work in the Virgin Islands on a self-liquidating basis" was made some time ago. Such rehabilitation was taken under study by a committee appointed by President Roosevelt, and a scheme to create a Government monopoly in the Islands as proposed by Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, was approved.

Other U. S. Industry Studied.

Officials working on the plan yesterday indicated that should the Government's rum venture in the Islands turn out successfully, Government industries may be attempted in this country in such places as the Tennessee Valley. It was revealed that Secretary Ickes is contemplating the possibility of establishing Government cement plants to supply that material for large building operations of the Public Works program because of the high prices charged by the industry.

The basis of the Virgin Islands experiment is a scheme for the Government to retain 50 per cent of the profits of manufacturing Virgin Islands rum and distribute the other 50 per cent to natives. The first of the Government rum is expected to be placed on the American market this fall in an effort to drive down domestic prices.

The plan was discussed with Gov. Pearson, of the Islands, when he was in Washington last fall, but nothing was done at the time, other than to head the matter up for committee study. The President named an advisory council for Gov. Pearson, including Secretary Ickes, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, George F. Peabody, philanthropist; Prof. Charles Tausig, economist; Dr. Mordacai Johnson, dean of Howard University; Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Alfred K. Stern, Chicago business man.

The three islands largely are pop-

17 Dead Also Removed From Hull; Rescue Work Goes On.

Sasedo Naval Base, Japan, March 14 (Wednesday) (U.P.).—Thirteen men had been brought out alive from the water-logged holds of the capsized torpedo boat Tomozuru, according to an official naval communique at 6 a. m. today.

Rescue workers reported they had recovered 30 men in all, at that hour, and that 17 of them were dead. Two sailors, unconscious, were rushed to the naval hospital.

Hope that others among the 113 officers and men trapped in the new steel torpedo boat when it overturned during maneuvers early Monday were still alive was heightened by the discovery of 13 breathing in the pitch-black holds. The majority, however, were feared drowned.

Rescuers were still cutting into the steel compartments. Information gathered from those rescued brought belief the captain was washed from the bridge by a wave.

West Virginian Given Life for $100 Theft

Charleston, W. Va., March 13 (Spl.).—For the theft of merchandise valued at $100, Esse Bowe, 36, was sentenced today by Judge Henry K. Black, in Kanawha County intermediate court, to life in the penitentiary. Under the State habitual criminal law Bowe had previously been convicted on two different charges of robbing postoffices. A stay was granted to permit an appeal or application for executive clemency.

Roper Asks Direct Ship Subsidy Plan

By Robert C. Albright.

Abandonment of ocean mail subsidies as an aid to American shipping, and substitution of a direct subsidy system "for the maintenance of essential services," was asked of Congress yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper.

Immediate action enacting into law five recommendations of the Shipping Board Bureau for effecting this change was asked by the Commerce Secretary.

He said he transmitted the plan with the authority of the President.

Five Specific Recommendations.

His recommendations called for:

1. Replacement of the present system of ocean mail subsidies by specific subsidies for essential services, but not extended to lines in protected trades.
2. Basing subsidy contracts on differentials in building and operating costs; making contracts flexible enough to permit adjustment with changed conditions, and providing for necessary replacements.
3. Three classifications of subsidies—a subsidy covering the construction differential; one covering the operating differential, and a "trade penetration" subsidy.
4. Direct appropriation of subsidy funds from the Treasury, rather than indirectly through Government departments.
5. Limitation of subsidies to not more than one line competing in the same trade.

Letters transmitting the report of Henry H. Heimann, director of the Commerce Department's shipping board bureau, were sent to the Senate Commerce Committee and the House Merchant Marine Committee by Secretary Roper with the caution:

"The new subsidy policy should be gradually introduced, replacing old subsidy contracts in fairness and equity, and, if possible, through mutual agreement, to prevent demoralization of the industry. There should be competitive bids on all subsidies."

Chairman Schuyler Otis Bland, of the House Merchant Marine Committee, said last night he will study the report before determining his legislative course. He said legislation to effect some changes in the shipping policy probably will be introduced.

A foreword to the Heimann report saw the necessity of placing American shipping aid on "a more rational basis than the system now in effect."

Must Offset Handicaps.

"Because American shipbuilding and ship-operating costs are the highest in the world, due to superior standards of living in the United States, continued Government aid is necessary in order to offset the competitive handicaps encountered by American ships operating in foreign trade," the report read.

Under the present mail contract system, the bureau stated, the Government has not "participated adequately in the various construction programs, and has therefore not maintained even a semblance of control over the price of ships, notwithstanding that the construction differential has in each case been

Utah-Idaho Quake Claims Second Life

New Shocks Jolt Airport at Salt Lake City.

Salt Lake City, March 13 (AP).—The second death attributed indirectly to the earthquake which shook Utah and southern Idaho yesterday occurred today. Charles Bithell, 55, died in a local hospital of injuries suffered in the cave-in of a waterworks trench.

Mrs. Ida Venable Atkinson, 21, of Ogden, Utah, died of fright yesterday. Minor damage consisted of cracked walls, toppled chimneys, broken windows and falling plaster.

Public schools here will reopen tomorrow.

Chicago-Dallas Air Speed Mark Broken

Chicago, March 13 (AP).—An air liner zoomed into Chicago from Dallas, Tex., today in 4 hours 48 minutes, 20 minutes faster than the previous commercial record. Pilot C. L. Beindorf, of United Air Lines, brought the ship from Dallas to Kansas City, and B. O. Howard piloted it on to Chicago, their speed averaging 200 miles an hour.

Army Air Mail Aids

Mrs. Rheem Denies Secret Hotel Visit

Tells Lorton Inquiry She Saw Former Husband Twice in City.

Mrs. Alice Wardman Rheem yesterday emphatically denied she had held a rendezvous with her former husband, Edmund D. Rheem, in an Alexandria hotel or any other place since he was committed to Lorton reformatory.

Mrs. Rheem, who divorced her husband shortly after he was sentenced to 15 years following the collapse of Swartzel, Rheem & Hensey, mortgage brokerage house, voluntarily appeared before the penal committee of the board of welfare to refute previous testimony to this effect.

Rheem and G. Bryan Pitts, another prisoner at Lorton who is alleged to have had meetings with his wife, will be questioned today at the reformatory when the welfare board committee transfers its headquarters to the institution.

In no way will the investigation at Lorton today be an "open house" for the indiscriminate hearing of prisoners' complaints, the committee insisted. Only those named as possible sources for verification of charges will be quizzed.

Taking of the investigation to the institution resulted from insistence of Capt. W. W. Barnard, superintendent of District Penal Institutions. Yesterday he took this question to the District Commissioners, who ruled in his favor.

Mrs. Rheem's testimony refuted one of the most definite of the charges that certain wealthy inmates were permitted to leave the prison and visit relatives. W. A. Stein, supervisor of the Occoquan wharf, testified last week that he was informed by a "stool pigeon" that during the winter of 1932, Rheem and Pitts were taken to visit their wives at the George Mason Hotel.

"I do not know Mr. or Mrs. Pitts," Mrs Rheem said. "I have never been at the George Mason Hotel to meet my husband."

She told of twice taking their child to see Rheem when he was in the city for personal bankruptcy proceedings. On one of these occasions she saw him at the jail and the other at the courthouse.

Mrs. Rheem declared that she had

Paralyzed Deaf Mute Suffocates in Fire

New York, March 13 (U.P.).—Louis Shier, a 20-year-old deaf mute youth who was paralyzed so that he could not walk, was killed today when fire damaged a four-room apartment in Brooklyn where he lived with his parents.

Louis was alone. Neighbors, who gave the alarm apparently forget him. He suffocated.

Truck Award Plan Upheld By Woodring

"Not Interested in Who Got Contracts," He Says to Inquiry.

"I wasn't interested, and my friends were not interested, in who obtained the contracts," Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, told the Rogers investigating committee yesterday in a vigorous defense of his handling of the Army's $10,000,000 motorization program, which was interrupted by grand jury proceedings.

"I want to say to this committee," Woodring added, "that if those bids are readvertised, it will cost the United States Government from $500,000 to $1,000,000 more.

"Results have shown that the way we handled the awards distributed the money more widely over the country than ever before, and that we obtained the lowest possible prices for motorized equipment as a result of our methods.

"I Changed Specifications."

"It is true that I made many changes in specifications for trucks, and I accept full responsibility for them. I would do the same thing again. Our specifications were the finest ever drawn."

The Assistant Secretary of War was testifying in the House military affairs investigation into alleged "irregularities and profiteering" in War Department expenditures, and traced for the investigators the entire course of procedure in regard to the $10,000,000 PWA allotment, from the time it was made until the Secretary of War ordered the awards held up.

Specifications reaching his office from the Quartermaster General's office were frequently "poorly prepared and ambiguous," Woodring said. Together with one of his aids, Lieut. Col. J. K. Crain, he laid most of the responsibility for protested contracts upon the Quartermaster Corps.

Ever since the World War, Woodring said, there has been constant clashes between the Quartermaster General's office and the General Staff, internecine strife in which the Assistant Secretary of War has sided with Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his chief assistants.

The chief difficulty, according to Woodring, was that the Quartermaster Corps wanted trucks built in such a way that companies couldn't compete with standard equipment, but would be forced to build especially for the Army.

He said it was a case of the tail trying to wag the dog, since the

All Mail Flights Held Up by Army

Indiana Robinson Hits Administration for Air Policies.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As Charles A. Lindbergh was named to a War Department committee to investigate operation of the Army Air Corps, Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson yesterday proposed consolidating into one unit and under a "fighting" leader all Government agencies dealing with land aviation in any of its aspects.

The Nation's foremost aviator will serve on a committee with Orville Wright and Clarence D. Chamberlin, noted civilian fliers, and Army officers, to study not only the carrying of air mail by the Army, but also the adequacy and efficiency of the Air Corps, under direction of Secretary of War George H. Dern.

Senator Robinson projected his proposal while replying to bitter criticism of President Roosevelt by Senator Arthur Robinson (Republican), Indiana. The latter shouted "tragic blunder" and "legalized murder" at the White House, holding the President responsible for the deaths of ten Army fliers.

"Begging" Lindbergh Is Claim.

The Hoosier Republican said that after slapping him for protesting against cancellation of the air-mail contracts, the Administration was "now whimpering to Col. Lindbergh and begging him to come here and get it out of the hole—the pit into which it has plunged."

Meanwhile, all Army air-mail planes unexpectedly remained grounded another day as preparations were delayed to resume flights on nine routes, announced Monday. Smarting under President Roosevelt's criticism of the Air Corps Saturday, the Army high command seemed determined not again to try to carry the mails until every precaution for safety had been taken.

Senate and House committees continued hearings on the bill providing for reawarding of air-mail contracts to private operators on a revised basis, with opposition developing against the proposal to base compensation on a space basis rather than on poundage and that requiring a waiver on the part of bidders of claims under former contracts.

The highlights of the day's air-mail developments, however, were the appointment of Col. Lindbergh to the committee of inquiry and Senator Robinson's proposal for a unified land aviation agency, leaving out only the Navy Department's Bureau of Aeronautics.

Secretary Dern named the three civilian flyers to a committee com-

Two Cadets Die In Plane Crash

San Antonio, Tex., March 13 (AP).—James W. Carson, 26, of Spartanburg, S. C., and Nelson T. Samuels, 22, of Severna Park, Md., advanced flying cadets at Kelly Field, were killed today.

Their training plane fell 1,000 feet at Camp Bullis, near here. Soldiers said the ship apparently went into a spin as the result of a stall, and that Carson, the pilot, did not have sufficient altitude to straighten it out.

The cadets, who started their advanced training at Kelly Field March 5, were on a reconnaisance mission in an observation type plane.

Carson was a graduate of South Carolina A. M. College.

Annapolis, Md., March 13 (Spl.).—Nelson C. Samuels, flying cadet, killed today, was graduated from the Naval Academy last June, but was not commissioned because of lack of vacancies. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin F. Samuels, of Severna Park.

Samuels was graduated from Severn Preparatory School at Severna Park before entering the naval school nearly five years ago. He was a noted athlete.

Finns Ban Fascist Uniform.

Helsingfors, Finland, March 13 (AP).—After suppression yesterday of a Fascist uprising in neighboring Estonia, the Finnish Diet today adopted a law forbidding the wearing of any kind of political shirts or emblems in public meetings or processions.

Woman Hunted as 'Brains' Of Missouri Kidnap Gang

St. Louis, March 13 (AP).—Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, pretty, talented wife of a physician, was sought tonight as the alleged "brains" of the gang that kidnaped Dr. I. D. Kelley, wealthy specialist, for ransom in 1931.

Five men were indicted with Mrs. Muench, the wife of Dr. Ludwig O. Muench. She has been under $25,000 bond which calls for her appearance before a Clayton justice of the peace March 20.

The men indicted are Felix McDonald, now serving a penitentiary sentence in an attempted abduction of a St. Louis man; Bart Davit, indicted in the same case but acquitted; Angelo Rosegrant, salesman; Tommy Wilders, a gangster, now said to be in Florida, and John C. Johnson, colored tenant of a farm, where Dr. Kelley was held prisoner.

Circuit Judge Frederick E. Mueller said he would not admit the defendants to bail. Kidnaping is a capital offense in Missouri.

The indictments followed publication of a version of the kidnaping given by Adolph Fielder, a Maplewood justice of the peace, who said he was in the confidence of the kidnap gang.

"He said a woman was the "brains" of the gang which lured Dr. Kelley from his home on a fake sick call, but later released him. No ransom was paid, principals in the case said.

War Contract Probe Report Given Garnett

Grand Jurors Write Post That No Dissention Entered Inquiry.

The District grand jury, which spent five weks investigating War Department contracts and then voted not to report any indictments, yesterday made a special report concerning the investigation to United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett.

The report was not made public, but was sent by Garnett to the Department of Justice.

Commenting on the investigation, Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, made a statement declaring that there had been no irregularities in his office. He declared he would change none of his decisions that have been subjects of criticism if he could.

Woodring, in his statement, said he welcomed the investigations being made of transactions in his office, and declared that pending their conclusion "there is being broadcast a campaign of insinuation and inuendo."

Blames Selfish Interest.

He said he was criticized for exercising supervision over procurement of supplies, but that the law requires him to do this.

"In 999 cases out of 1,000 no exception is taken to my official action," Woodring said. "But occasionally some one is dissatisfied that certain business goes to a competitor rather than to himself. These rare instances have led to the objections that we hear about us. But disappointments to some people are inevitable if I am to do the job that I am sworn to perform."

Woodring went into the purchase of airplanes, now under investigation by a House committee, declaring his action in this connection was to insure that all manufacturers would be given an opportunity to bid. He added he had made no changes in specifications but only in methods of procurement. He said he believed airplanes meeting the requirements of National defense can be obtained by open bidding.

In connection with activities of Joseph Silverman, surplus material dealer, who was barred from doing business just before the investigations started, Woodring said no material had been sold to Silverman's firm since he has been Assistant Secretary of War.

He said he had made a tentative agreement with Silverman to sell certain surplus materials but that when the chief of staff informed him the material was needed, the transaction was dropped.

Dissention Is Denied.

Woodring also denied report of dissention in the War Department. "Scurrilous statements and insinuations," he said, "have been made to the effect that serious conflicts existed between the Secretary of War and myself; and between the Chief of Staff and the General Staff and myself. There is no foundation whatever for such inferences. The most cordial and friendly relations have existed at all times without a single exception.

"I have performed all the manifold duties of my office with a scrupulous regard for the public interest and in conformity with the statutes of Congress and the expressed will of the President of the United States and the Secretary of War. In spite of complaints, insinuations and sniping by special, selfish interests, I will not swerve from this course."

Levin P. Handy, foreman of the grand jury, addressed a letter to The Post denying that the jury intended to make a report to the District Court and telling of the jury's decision that the report should be made to Garnett. The letter also denied that the jury was to report dissatisfaction with the conduct of the case. The Post had been informed that some of the members were planning to make such a report.

Handy's letter said:

"The report in your issue of March 13, 1934, on the action of the grand jury in its investigation into alleged irregularities in the War Department has come to the attention of the grand jury, and I am directed by them, as foreman, to write this letter to you.

Report Is Not Planned.

"It is noted that in the article the statement is made that the grand jury 'planned to make a report to the District Supreme Court today.' In the same article it is further stated, 'It is understood the jury is not satisfied with the manner in which the investigations have been handled, and that at least some of the members intend to make their feelings known.'

"The grand jury does not plan to make a report to the District of Columbia Supreme Court today or at any other time in this matter. By a unanimous vote the grand jury has decided to make its report to the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, and has done so.

"The grand jury is satisfied with the manner in which the investigations have been handled, and no member of this body has any intention of making a complaint regarding the manner in which the investigations were handled.

"I am directed by the grand jury to state to you that they are of the unanimous belief that the case was presented by the United States attorney's office in an able and thoroughly fair and proper manner, and that all available evidence was brought to their attention in a manner which left nothing to be desired."

36-Hour Auto Week Is Urged

Immediate Pay Raise Is Urged Also on Eve of Conference Here.

Detroit, March 13 (AP).—The directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce announced tonight that they had recommended to the members that the average weekly hours of productive workers be cut from 40 to 36, and that wage increases be made effective on or before March 31.

The announcement was made on the eve of the meeting in Washington of the Nation Labor Board with automobile manufacturers and employes to settle labor disputes in the Michigan automobile industry.

The statement said that the members of the industry, "intending to keep the law, do not intend to submit to being coerced extra-legally."

"Labor unrest in the automobile industry," said the statement, "has been brought about principally not by dissatisfaction with wages and working conditions, but rather has been caused by artificial issues that have arisen out of the efforts to unionize the plants involved."

Physician Slays Youth In Street, Surrenders

Appalachia, Va., March 13 (AP).—Dr. C. A. Hutchinson surrendered and was released on bond yesterday, in connection with the slaying of Dewey Hunycutt, 29, on a business street here.

Dr. Hutchinson walked to the Town Hall and surrendered to Town Manager John Fletcher, who quoted the physician as saying Hunycutt made an insulting remark about Hutchinson's wife.

Just 'Tired of Drinking,' He Asks for 90 Days

Fredericksburg, Va., March 13 (Spl.).—He was "tired of drinking, but could not stop," so Clarendon Green asked for a 90-day sentence to the State Penal Farm at Staunton. It will do me good," he explained.

Woodring Defends Contracts, Bidding

Army bought only 1 per cent of the country's output of motorized vehicles. He disclosed that his idea was to have specifications drawn so that competition might be broadened to include as many commercial types as possible.

"There's a certain Army crowd," he said, "which wants to make the commercial people come to them."

The Assistant Secretary of War also disclosed that, while the General Staff does not control specifications it is in constant consultation with the civilian branches of the War Department, seeing that the eventual specifications fit the staff's "military characteristics."

Referring to criticisms aimed at his changing specifications, Woodring told of grand jury proceedings, just concluded, regarding the "splash system" of lubrication and the "full force system." He revealed that when he ordered changes, after consulting technical advisers, from "splash" to "full force," the General Motors Corporation protested because this barred Chevrolet trucks. Yet, said Woodring, Chevrolet was the only truck of the type in question which hadn't changed to "full force" lubrication.

Woodring was questioned about trucks bought for the Civilan Conservation Corps last year, on which bids were advertised for only a few days. He explained this by saying "the men were in the field," and the heads of the CCC were demanding haste.

Westover Has no Doubts.

Earlier in the hearing, Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, assistant chief of Air Corps, testified he had not been consulted by his chief, Maj. Gen B. D. Foulois, before the latter gave assurance the Army was ready and able to fly the mails. He said he did not know of anyone consulted by Gen. Foulois, but added he himself had never had any doubt, "then or now" that the Army can carry the air mail "as originally planned."

Gen. Westover defended the practice of negotiated contracts so much discussed before the Rogers committee, and explained away his letter to Brig. Gen H. C. Pratt regarding lobbyists in Woodring's office by saying he had believed other airplane companies would follow the lead of the Wright company, and that a change to competitive bidding would result.

Lindy Named To Army Air Corps Inquiry

prising the Drum Board of Army officers which for a year has been studying needs for a general headquarters air force. The Army officers included Maj. Gen. H. A. Drum, deputy chief of staff; Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of Air Corps; Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds, commadant of War College; Maj. Gen. John W. Gulick, chief of Coast Artillery, and Brig. Gen. C. E. Kilbourne, assistant chief of staff.

This committee was instructed to study and report on performances by the Army Air Corps in carrying air mail and the "adequacy and efficiency of its technical flying equipment and training for such a mission."

"The Secretary of War," the announcement explained, "desires the committee to include especially in its considerations of equipment such flying instruments as are deemed necessary for beneficial avigation and night, beacon, and radio controlled flights and landings, and in its consideration of personnel, their training and experience in cross-country flying, in night flying, blind flying and in instrument flying, and their understanding and employment of the instruments referred to above.

"The committee is authorized to call such witnesses and take such testimony as it may deem necessary."

Await Lindbergh Acceptance.

Col. Lindbergh was not in the city and whether he will accept appointment to the committee is not known, although it was believed he will. He was in a lengthy conference Saturday with Secretary Dern, in which the Air Corps' equipment and training were discussed.

Chamberlin in New York announced he would accept appointment to the committee. He vigorously defended the Air Corps handling of the mail, contending that inclement weather conditions were responsible for the ten deaths. He asserted that commercial air lines lost proportionately as many lives during February as did the Army in mail service.

It was learned after Secretary Dern's announcement that there has been considerable discussion in Army circles of a proposal to create a permanent board for aeronautics, which would coordinate military and civilian activities, as well as all Government agencies dealing with aviation. The Secretaries of War, Navy and Commerce and the Postmaster General were suggested as members of such a board.

Senator Robinson's proposal, however, goes far beyond that suggestion. He would assemble all bureaus to do with aviation, except naval aeronautics, under a single head, one who, as he termed it, would be "not only well trained and familiar with the history of the problems, but who believes that aviation is an essential and indispensabe part of the military service of this Nation."

Would Govern All Buying.

"I should like to see coupled with that a provision for all aviation purchases, so far as practicable, to be made by a single organization, audited by the Comptroller General," Senator Robinson told the Senate. "This will give the people what they are entitled to have: an efficient and able air force and will tend to remove the opportunity for dishonesty and fraudulent arrangements.

"If that result is achieved there will result some measure of compensation for the tragedies which have happened, due, in large part, to unusual and extraordinary weather conditions, and, in some part, to lack of proper and adequate equipment."

Elaborating subsequently on this part of his speech, Senator Robinson said he would include air-mail operations by private operators under his proposed agency. He said there was much to be said for the creation of a Secretary of Aviation, but he would not include that detail in his proposal.

Present System "Absurd."

"The only way to get a mobile, efficient Air Corps is to reorganize the absurd system under which aviation functions are handled by eight or ten departments," he explained. "Put all these under a fighting leader and we'll make progress. I make no distinction between military and civilian aviation.

"Instead of lagging behind foreign nations in developing aviation, instead of having obsolete equipment, we should lead the world and we'll never do it until we centralize aviation functions and put someone in charge sympathetic with the importance of aviation in National defense. That is the idea I want the country to consider. The details can be worked out later on."

In some quarters Senator Robinson's proposal was regarded as a trial balloon for the Administration to test public sentiment. His proposal could be carried out without legislation. Under the reorganization section of the economy act the President has power by Executive order to consolidate all the aviation agencies under one head.

In his speech replying to his Indiana namesake, the Democratic leader said he offered his proposal as a constructive suggestion. He contended that something must be done to improve the efficiency of the Air Corps, adding that "it is not just and you can not get away with denouncing the President as a murderer."

Motive Termed Honest.

"His motive was not murder, but honest administration of government," he said in reference to the President's cancellation of the air-mail contracts and transfer of air mail to the Army.

These contracts, he continued, had become "a common scandal" and that it was the President's duty to cancel them as soon as he became convinced they were tainted with "fraud and collusion." The President, he added, accepted full responsibility for cancelling the contracts.

2D ADD AIR

The Democratic leader pointed out that Gen. Foulois had given the President assurances that the Army was qualified to carry the air mail. He said later Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, had welcomed this new responsibility for the Army.

The Army, he added, had 11 days in which to prepare for the task and all had agreed this time was sufficient. Consequently, he said, he could not understand the reiterated inquiry of the Indiana Robinson as to why the President thought the Army could do the job.

Sharp Blow at President.

The Hoosier Robinson said the Army fatalities were due to "a tragic blunder in the White House," that ten men had died because of "the ineptitude of the Administration." He said the President's order transferring the mail to the Army was "legalized murder" or in any event "manslaughter."

He said the President had struck "a terrific blow" at the aviation industry and had injured the National defense. One would think, he continued, the President would "take the responsibility instead of shifting it to the shoulders of brave men who have no choice but to obey the commander in chief."

The effort to shift the blame to the Army, he said, was on a par with the Administration's attack on Col. Lindbergh and the subsequent efforts to undo that act. The Hoosier Republican contended the President had taken "political and not technical advice" from Postmaster General James A. Farley as to the ability of the Army to carry the mail.

Later in the day Senator Simeon D. Fess (Republican), Ohio, said that later it would be shown there was "no fraud in connection with the air-mail contracts." He urged the President to make "an honest confession, admit his mistake and reinstate the contracts, making whatever adjustments thought necessary under existing law."

He said the President had been advised by "an ignorant counselor who did not know the law or how to interpret it," without, however, naming anyone.

Fears More Fatalities.

"I fear that unless we take the air mail away from the Army there will be more fatalities," the Ohioan shouted, and went on to add that "inclement weather had nothing to do with it."

He said that the record of the Air Lines Consolidated, running from New York to Florida and covering 6,000,000 miles in the last six years, with only two aviators lost "stands out in contrast with the fact that since the Army took over the air mail an aviator has been killed every other day—10 in 20 days."

This transport company, with others, he said, realizing the Army was not sufficiently trained offered to the War Department their trained personnel, but the offers were rejected.

The average death rate in all air-mail lines under private operation, Senator Fess contended, was one in every 4,500,000 miles flown, but since the Army took over the job there has been ten deaths "before 1,000,000 miles have been flown." He cited at length the technical training lacked by the Army fliers.

So little interest did the Republicans show in Senator Fess' speech that during most of it only Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, Maryland, was present. He left before the Ohioan concluded, leaving him to talk to empty seats on the Republican side. Six Democrats constituted his audience, aside from the galleries.

Shake-up Plan NamesRanking Army Officers

Five Chiefs Included in Shift of Command by Roosevelt.

A new line-up of the Army's high command was forwarded to the Senate yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Although War Department officials explained the changes as necessary to fill vacancies caused by death, promotion or retirement, and denied they were brought about by recent criticism, the shake-up affected five chiefs and five assistant chiefs of Army services.

The President's nominations, recommended by Secretary of War Dern, would change the command of the Quartermaster General's department and the Field Artillery, Coast Artillery, Cavalry and Ordnance services. At the same time, he sent to the Senate the name of Rear Admiral Claud C. Bloch, Navy Budget Officer, to be Judge Advocate General of the Navy.

Gen. Pillsbury Remains.

In only one instance was the rotating service rule of the Army overlooked. Brig. Gen. George B. Pillsbury was retained in his present post as assistant to the Chief of Engineers.

Elevated to Quartermaster General with the rank of Major General, was Col. Louis H. Bash, succeeding Maj. Gen. John L. DeWitt, whose detail expired February 2. Col. William R. Gibson, Quartermaster Supply Officer of the New York General Depot, will replace Brig. Gen. Henry C. Whitehead as Assistant Quartermaster General.

Col. Upton Birnie, jr., now stationed in the Philippines, was named chief of the Field Artillery, with rank of Major General. He will succeed Maj. Gen. Harry G. Bishop, who is up for retirement. The post of Chief of the Coast Artillery was assigned to Col. William F. Hase in the place of Maj. Gen. John W. Gulick. The Ordnance Department has been placed in charge of Brig. Gen. William H. Tschappat and Cavalry in charge of Col. Leon B. Kromer. They succeed Maj. Gen. Samuel Hof and Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry.

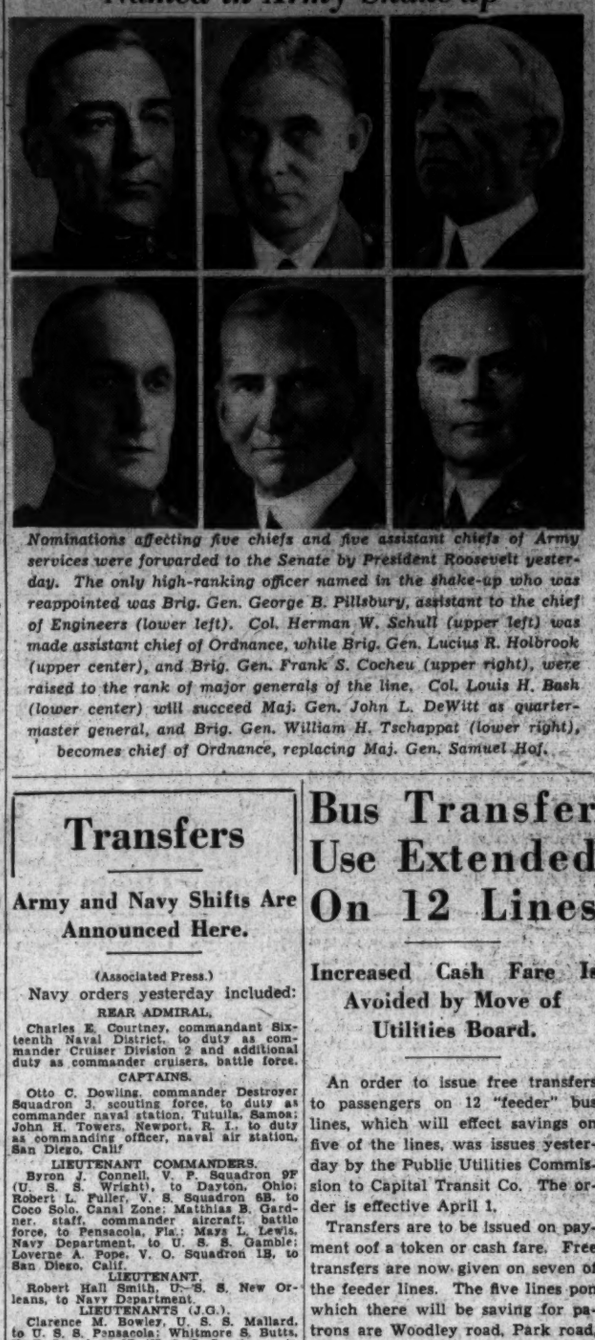
Colonels Made Generals.

Col. Herman W. Schull and Col. Edward M. Shinkle were raised to the rank of brigadier general and named assistants to the chief of ordnance. Lieut. Col. Jacob E. Fickel and Lieut. Col. James E. Chaney are the new assistant chiefs of the Air Corps with rank of brigadier general.

The President's nominations also would raise Brig. Gen. Lucius H. Holbrook and Brig. Gen. Frank S. Cocheu to be major generals of the line, filling vacancies created by the death last December of Maj Gen. Edward L. King and the retirement last month of Maj. Gen. Ewing E. Booth.

Cols. Guy V. Henry, the present chief of cavalry; John L. DeWitt, present quartermaster general; John W. Gulick, Harry E. Knight, Charles M. Bundel, Charles D. Herron and Percy P. Bishop were promoted to the rank of brigadier general.

Named in Army Shake-up



Nominations affecting five chiefs and five assistant chiefs of Army services were forwarded to the Senate by President Roosevelt yesterday. The only high-ranking officer named in the shake-up who was reappointed was Brig. Gen. George B. Pillsbury, assistant to the chief of Engineers (lower left). Col. Herman W. Schull (upper left) was made assistant chief of Ordnance, while Brig. Gen. Lucius R. Holbrook (upper center), and Brig. Gen. Frank S. Cocheu (upper right), were raised to the rank of major generals of the line. Col. Louis H. Bash (lower center) will succeed Maj. Gen. John L. DeWitt as quartermaster general, and Brig. Gen. William H. Tschappat (lower right), becomes chief of Ordnance, replacing Maj. Gen. Samuel Hof.

Tidewater Led Peery Attack

Governor's Only Defeats Dealt by Coalition in Senate.

Norfolk, Va., March 13 (Spl.).—Tidewater representatives in the General Assembly handed Gov. Peery his only defeat during the session which ended Saturday, according to reports here.

The Tidewater Senators led a coalition that defeated the Governor's proposal for the allocation of highway funds on the basis of uncompleted mileage, and also halted an increase in the gap fund, under which the highway commission could have spent practically all of the construction money at its own discretion.

The House had passed a bill to increase the gap fund to $2,000,000 and the Senate amended it to limit the amount to the present figure of $1,000,000.

Senators Rogers (Sussex), who joined Senators Lesner, Eggleston, Hillard and Holland in leading the fight on the "uncompleted" mileage allocations, secured a resolution providing a commission to report on "uncompleted mileage," and to have toll bridges recognized as links in the State systems included in the cost of uncompleted mileage.

Hagerstown Militia Is Given Inspection

Hagerstown, Md., March 13 (Spl.).—The annual inspection of Company B, Maryland National Guard, was held last night.

The inspection was by Capt. W. L. Tydings and Sergt. David R. Perkins, for the Army, and Col. D. John Markey, Frederick, commander of the First Regiment, for the State.

Bus Transfer Use Extended On 12 Lines

Increased Cash Fare Is Avoided by Move of Utilities Board.

An order to issue free transfers to passengers on 12 "feeder" bus lines, which will effect savings on five of the lines, was issues yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission to Capital Transit Co. The order is effective April 1.

Transfers are to be issued on payment oof a token or cash fare. Free transfers are now given on seven of the feeder lines. The five lines pon which there will be saving for patrons are Woodley road, Park road, Randlle Highlands-Eastern High School, Washington Interburban-East Washington and the Anacostia-Congress Heights lines.

The other lines which gave free transfers prior to the issuance of the order are Potomac Park, West End, Hillcrest, Chevy Chase loop, Benning, South Washington and the Bureau of Printing and Engraving loop.

In the case of the Anacostia-Congress Heights line, a direct saving in fare will result, because this line now has a fare of 10 cents. The 5-cent fare on the Bureau of Engraving and Chevy Chase loop lines is not disturbed by the order.

The 20-cent cash fare for the Chevy Chase Coach line remains the same. If a passenger wishes to transfer from the loop line to the coach line, he must pay the fare charged for the use of the coach line and there is no extra charge for the transfer.

Bank Bandits Make Getaway With Hostages

Mason City, Iowa, March 13 (AP). Holding at bay a large crowd which gathered outside, seven machine gun bandits raided the First National Bank here today and escaped with cash estimated at $52,344.

As they fled, they lined the running boards of their automobile with bystanders to protect them from possible gunfire of vigilantes and police on nearby roofs. The hostages were later released.

The hostages were released soon after the bandits had passed the city limits.

Hanford MacNider, former U. S. Minister to Canada, is chairman of the bank's board.

The crowd that witnessed the holdup was cowed by machine guns at each entrance to the bank. The bandits fired wildly at the crowd and into the air, and wounded one bystander, R. L. James. James is secretary of the Mason City school board.

The bandits ordered the 31 employes and about 25 customers to raise their hands. They seized several persons in the lobby to prevent guards from firing. One of them took H. C. Fisher, assistant cashier, back to the main vault, forced him to open it and pass out the money.

Tom Walters, bank guard, in his cage overlooking the bank lobby, was spotted by the bandits and a machine gun sprayed the shatterproof glass.

Because the lobby was filled it was impossible for Walters to shoot. Walters fired a couple of tear gas bombs.

"If we had known we were going to run into this—tear gas, we wouldn't have tried it," said one of the gang.

As the bandits had entered the bank, Willis G. C. Bagley, president, attempted to reach his private office. One pursued him and fired through the office door. The bullet grazed Bagley's chest.

Felon Facing Gas Cell Tries Suicide

Jailer Balks Attempt of Colorado Slayer.

Delta, Colo., March 13 (AP).—Lloyd Frady, 24, under sentence to die in the gas chamber at Colorado State Prison, attempted to hang himself in the county jail, officials disclosed today.

Jailer Brad Seabourn, making a round of the cells at 7 o'clock last night, found Frady suspended by a piece of bailing wire which had been twisted about his neck and then tied to the top bar of his cell. He was unconscious. Today he apparently was suffering no ill effects.

"I just wanted to beat 'em to it," Frady said.

Retailers Balk At NRA's Plea To Raise Wages

Program Threatened by Service Industries' Reluctance.

A threat to the NRA attempt to raise wages and shorten hours wherever possible in industry came to the surface here yesterday, when it was learned the service industries are reluctant to go along with the program and are asking for separate treatment.

It is the view of leaders of service industries, which include retail stores, drug stores, restaurants and the like, that the cause of reemployment can best be served in their case by stricter enforcement of the codes.

They also favor, in general, the removal of exemption provisions from their codes, which at present do not permit watchmen and certain others to take advantage of hour limitations.

Their spokesmen point out, however, that units in the industries are so small that they are less susceptible to blanket hour and wage action than are the manufacturing groups.

Administrator Hugh S. Johnson divided industry into capital and consumer goods classifications at the recent code authority conferences. The capital goods spokesmen already have indicated that they, as a body, can do little to aid reemployment until the securities act is relaxed to permit greater activity in the capital markets.

The service industries were classed with the consumer-goods group, which has been endeavoring to meet the President's requests. Under the leadership of George Sloan, chairman of the cotton textile code, they convened yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel to discuss the problem. If the service industries were removed from this classification, its ranks would be substantially reduced.

Administrator Johnson, however, has indicated he is not ready to concede to such divisions. The spokesman for the services in consumers' group conferences is Rivers Peterson, chairman of the retail code authority. He has been participating to date, however, merely in the role of an "observer."

Encouragement was given to the Administration, however, by the packing industry, whose code authority wired Gen. Johnson yesterday: "We will raise wages to those already established by CWA as minimum for common labor, and are willing to accept 30 hours per week for unskilled labor as the starting point of hourly schedule, with exception for other wage brackets in proportion to the skill and scarcity of labor.

"Members of the canning and packing machinery industry at the meeting have indicated a desire also to join with this schedule."

She Faints

But Mother's Testimony Fails to Free Son.

Although his mother took the stand to bolster his alibi that he was in New York when several persons in a Sixth street home were robbed by a man who forced an entrance, a jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday found James C. Neal, 25 years old, guilty of robbery.

The mother, Mrs. Nellie Pearl Neal, of New York City, remained in the courtroom after testifying. When the jury returned its verdict she swooned, and Justice Peyton Gordon ordered a recess.

The charge against Neal is that he robbed a group of persons of approximately $200 last June. He, with three others, was arrested by Detective Sergt. Frank Brass when the detective found them in a room at the Arlington Hotel.

'I Love That Man!' Sues for Divorce

Laura La Plante Files Bill in Latvia.

London, March 13 (U.P.).—The beautiful and blonde Laura La Plante, screen favorite from St. Louis, still loves William A. Selter, her director husband, but is suing for divorce in Latvia, she revealed here today.

She told reporters that she had filed divorce action at Riga on the grounds "of incompatibility of temperament, independent of guilt on either side," and explained she meant neither was to blame.

"I've always adored my husband, and still adore him," the actress said. "I married him because we were such great friends—but there's where we made our big mistake.

"All the time, I felt we never got beyond the bonds of friendship. We were too good as pals to be married. There have been no quarrels and no miserable situation, but we are sure we can find greater happiness.

Divorced Wife Denies Meeting Rheem in Hotel

only been at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria once. On that occasion, she said, she met Mrs. James Rasbach, Mrs. Rasbach's mother and her two children, all of Accotink, Va. Before her Reno divorce of August 28, 1932, she said she visited her husband on regular visiting days, every other Sunday.

"Absolutely no, so help me God," Mrs. Rheem answered to the question of W. W. Millan, chairman of the committee, who asked: "You have never met Mr. Rheem at the George Mason Hotel?" She appeared voluntarily.

It seems the disposition of the committee to confine itself to the investigation of the definite charges made by Representative Shoemaker, of Minnesota, and his chief informant, Edward Bedell, former Lorton inmate, both of whom gave evidence of alleged graft, cruelty, bribery, and the presence of drugs, liquor and immorality.

Duke Charges Intimidation.

This was the attitude in the committee's reception of the voluntary testimony of Jesse C. Duke, local attorney whose accusations against Leo A. Rover, former United States Attorney, and District Supreme Court Justice F. Dickinson Letts resulted in a disbarment proceedings, from which a decision has not yet been rendered.

Duke presented the committee with a two-page statement. In it he charged Capt. Barnard with intimidating a client of his to prevent his giving testimony concerning prison conditions. He also charged graft in connection with the laying of flooring at the Receiving Home for Children.

Duke had brought with him Erskine R. Fisher, who he said would be able to testify about the illegal and improper handling of the contract for the receiving home. The committee refused to hear Fisher, Chairman Millan stating the question beyond the scope of the present probe.

Refuses More Testimony.

Millan repeatedly asked Duke if he had anything more to add which would present evidence of Duke's own knowledge. The attorney declared he would give no more testimony at this time.

Another of Duke's charges was that Assistant United States Attorney James R. Kirkland was permitted to deliver a "sermon" during one of the jail's religious services, at which he asked prisoners not to inform others about official graft, but to "take the matter up with the United States Attorney's office."

W. N. Spicer, a Civil Works Administration engineer on the new Lorton construction projects, who said he had been discharged after he had made a contract for railway ties, told the committee of alleged poor and slow work on the projects.

He said CWA men and prisoners were worked side by side in defiance of CWA orders. When he approached J. E. F. Bischoff, Lorton business manager, about this Spicer said Bischoff replied: "Anybody who does not like it can get the hell off the job. I am running this job."

Claims Work Inefficient.

Spicer said two of the buildings were out of line, that they were begun without blueprints, and that the work in general was poor, slow and inefficient. He told the committee he was experienced as a construction engineer.

The day's testimony closed with that of Capt. Thomas M. Rives, superintendent of the District Jail since September of last year, who told of details of jail administration and punishment.

With an average population of 550 persons per day, Capt. Rives said only 35 had been disciplined since January 1. Punishment, he said, consists of solitary confinement on a diet of bread and water. Maximum solitary confinement was seven days. Rives added the bread and water was supplemented by rgular food after six days.

Jail food, Capt. Rives said, is good in quantity, quality and method of preparation. He said certain prisoners doing trusted duties sometimes had desserts, such as "gelatin and bread pudding."

Shoemaker Would Question.

Meantime, permission to question several witnesses and officials in the Lorton penal investigation of the Board of Public Welfare was requested yesterday by Representative F. H. Shoemaker (Minnesota).

In a letter to Judge M. M. Doyle, board member, the Minnesota Representative charged "most of the questions are in the nature of a defense of those being investigated."

Representative Shoemaker wrote he had no desire to belittle efforts of the committee. He added those conducting the examination of witnesses seemed unfamiliar with the subject matter and "the manner by which to get the desired results."

"I sincerely believe that I can render a valuable service to your committee," he wrote, "and it is with this constructive thought in mind that I hereby tender my services to your committee."

Shoemaker predicted he would be able to produce facts to cause indictments.

Tax Suit Faces Watson Backer

Chicago, March 13 (AP).—Criminal information charging Jacob R. Finkelsteinfi described by United States Attorney Dwight Green as campaign manager for former United States Senator James E. Watson in 1932, with failure to pay income tax on $96,753 for 1930, was filed today in Federal court.

Bond was set at $5,000. The offense is punishable by a maximum sentence of one year in jail and a $10,000 fine.

The information was hurriedly prepared, as the statute of limitations on the offense is effective March 15.

Filing of the information protects the Government's case under the statute of limitations, and makes it possible for grand jury action later on such more serious charges as wilful evasion, punishable by a five-year prison term.

Federal officials said Finkelstein was a former resident of Terre Haute, Ind., but has lived in Chicago for some time.

The income in question allegedly was derived by Finkelstein for services in connection with purchased stock of the Matchless Electric Co. by the Grigsby-Grunow Co., which today was adjudicated bankrupt.

U. S. to Make Rum On Virgin Islands

ulated by Negroes, most of whom are destitute, with the former flourishing rum business nonexistant. The Government has options on 6,000 acres of the small amount of workable land and has acquired the small number of sugar mills and other equipment there.

The Government land, according to the scheme, is to be worked in small blocks, employing three or four workers, who are to be paid wages and then participate in profits, through a welfare association.

Possibility of extending the scheme to Puerto Rico is under consideration, although it is anticipated that American interests there will oppose it. Mrs. Roosevelt and Guy Rexford Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, are investigating possibilities of such an extension in their present visit to the island.

The Virgin Islands were acquired from Denmark in 1917. Prohibition spelled ruin for the islands' rum industry, which produced a well-known liquor. Cuban and Haitian rum is being purchased to produce a blended product as soon as possible in order to speed rehabilitation of the industry.

Coupled with the Government operation of the rum and sugar business will be the development of subsistence homesteads for the islanders. It also is planned to establish a Government-operated tourist hotel on the island of St. Thomas in an effort to develop tourist trade.

Strikes Believed Crushed in Cuba

Government Drafts Liberal Labor Legislation.

Havana, March 13 (AP).—President Carlos Mendieta today said, 'I am optimistic" and most of the capital apparently agreed the backbone of revolutionary strikes had been broken.

Despite reports that political extremists were organizing a general strike, the consensus seemed that the government's action in dissolving labor syndicates, while guaranteeing benefits for workers, had reassured the masses.

The government was drafting liberal labor legislation, while courts began cases against an estimated thousand persons arrested during the strikes. Among the defendants are hundreds of foreigners.

D. C. Estate Measure Introduced in House

A bill to provide for conservation and settlement of estates of absentees and absconders in the District was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana.

The measure already has been offered in the Senate by Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

Receivership In Woodridge Bank Expected

Treasury Doubts Legality of Directors' Group Protests.

Establishment of a receivership for the remaining assets of the Woodridge-Langdon Savings and Commercial Bank yesterday was regarded as probable by the Treasury Department. Doubt also was expressed as to the legality of protests by the directors' committee of the closed institution.

Attention was called to the statement issued by Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor, on November 8, 1933, following appointment of Federal receivers for the Woodridge-Langdon and six other restricted banks forming the Hamilton National Bank.

"Under the law, it was necessary to appoint receivers to replace conservators, in order that proper notice creditors could be given and the trust finally liquidated. The comptroller in these cases has no option. He must appoint receivers."

The claim advanced by the committee is based on the fact that most of the customers of the bank reside in the neighborhood of the closed institution, the 2000 block Rhode Island avenue northeast, and will be inconvenienced by the transfer of its remaining assets downtown to the former District National Bank.

The former District National Bank is utilized as headquarters of the Federal receivers for five of the Hamilton Bank components.

H. H. Olmstead's Funeral Set Today

Safety Official at Army's Picatinny Arsenal.

H. H. Olmstead, the man upon whom the Army depended to prevent loss of life from the handling of munitions at the Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, N. J., is dead.

He will be given a military funeral in Arlington Cemetery at 2 p. m. today. Mr. Olmstead died Sunday.

After serving in the Navy at the battle of Manila, Mr. Olmstead entered the Government service at the Navy's proving ground at Indian Head, Md. In 1923 he was appointed assistant shell foreman at Picatinny and four years later was made safety engineer.

In tribute to his service, the ordnance department yesterday issued the following statement: "In the death of Mr. Olmstead, the ordnance department loses an authority of safety, and the arsenal one of its outstanding employes, whose wide experience and professional attainments were of unusual value to his country."

Gun Victim in Hospital.

Murphy to Fight Sugar Quota Cut

Philippine Governor Sees Dire Consequences.

Manila, P. I., March 13 (AP).—Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy, who has been fighting congressional imposition of a 5-cent excise tax on coconut oil, today took up the cudgels against a congressional plan to reduce the Philippine sugar quota below that proposed by President Roosevelt.

He telegraphed Secretary of War Dern the President's suggested quota of 1,037,000 short tons was acceptable to the islands, although it would require a 30 per cent reduction in the current crop.

The governor warned the Secretary that "the economic problem in the event of further reduction of the sugar quota will become exceedingly serious."

He pointed out prices of such basic products as copra, hemp and tobacco are extremely low and if the cocohut oil tax is approved "from eight to fifteen provinces will become practically bankrupt and the livelihood of some 3,000,000 people will be threatened.

"Rotten Deal" Over, Hopkins Tells South

New Relief Plan for Rural America Is Being Formed.

Atlanta, March 13 (AP).—The Federal Government is going to see that the man who got a "rotten deal in 1928 and 1929" gets an even break now, Harry Hopkins, National relief administrator, said today.

Hopkins, speaking to relief administrators from 12 Southern States, here for the purpose of adopting a plan for rehabilitation in rural sections, said the program as planned will be something more than an emergency affair.

"Let's forget emergencies," Hopkins said. "We are making this thing a new idea. We'll take care of the emergencies as they arise from time to time."

The administrator said approximately 120,000 families in the South would benefit by the program proposed and developed by President Roosevelt.

He outlined general plans as obtaining for the rural destitute a small tract of decent land, a decent house, lending him a mule, cow, hog and chickens, and advancing him necessary groceries until he becomes self-sustaining.

For a cash income he suggested public works programs in rural areas and the development of small industries in the farm district.

The land owners, he said, generally were not being considered in the program. If the land owner is broke the Government will lend him a little money to tide him over, he added.

"We are going to quit giving relief, per se, in all rural America," he said, adding that "we must make the people now on relief rolls self-sustaining."

Hopkins said it was absurd to think of 600,000 families in the country being on relief rolls. "We are now taking care of 10 per cent of all farm families in America."

Homer Willman Dies From Crash Injuries

Mellowness in Cigars

Only Grade A "Vintage" Tobaccos used in the filler of WHITE OWLS

CHATEAU Lafite, Château Ponte-Cenet, Moselle Spatlese . . . great wines . . . but at their best in "Vintage" years . . . years in which nature gave an added mellowness, richer flavor.

We know where the "Vintage" crops are located—and we use only Grade A Tobacco from such crops for White Owl fillers.

No harsh tobaccos are ever used in the filler of White Owls. Only "Vintage" tobaccos. That's why we are able to put a Grade A "Vintage" band on every White Owl in Washington. That's why you can be sure of a milder smoke from a White Owl.

How White Owl Smokers are Protected

THE General Cigar Co., through a 10-year-old Crop Control System, knows the condition of tobacco-growing districts in Pennsylvania and Ohio—the two states which produce nearly all United States cigar filler tobaccos. The amount of rainfall . . . of sunshine . . . the condition of the soil—are all recorded. From these records, it is possible to forecast every "Vintage" crop . . . and only tobaccos from such crops are purchased for White Owls.

But "Vintage" crops alone are not enough. Under the control system—all filler tobaccos are classified into seven grades. Only the top three grades pass White Owl's strict requirements. That's why we can truthfully say— White Owls are made only from Grade A "Vintage" filler tobaccos.

At the present moment, there is enough Grade A "Vintage" filler tobacco aging in our warehouses to make over 1 billion White Owls—more than a three-year supply. That is why White Owl never has to use non-vintage filler tobaccos.

Grade A "Vintage" filler tobacco is aged from 2 to 4 years—an average of 3 years.

Today we are using in the filler of White Owls two famous "Vintage" crops . . . the 1931 Pennsylvania and the 1930 Ohio. Look for the Grade A "Vintage" Band.

Bureaus, High Tax Dangerous Says Harriman

Commerce Chief Urges Business Men to Aid President.

Nashville, Tenn., March 13 (AP). "The two outstanding dangers in our present situation," Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said today "are the growth of bureaucratic control of business and the unwise expenditure of public money beyond the proper ability of the country to repay."

Speaking before the Nashville Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Harriman cited emergency expenditures provided in the Roosevelt recovery program, and declared:

"If the present emergency program, with its huge public expenditures, is to end, as the President hopes, with the fiscal year 1934-35, and if we have a balanced budget in the succeeding year and soon thereafter begin to reduce our National indebtedness, the problem is simple.

"If, on the other hand, those now receiving the aid of Government come to regard such assistance as permanent and if our unemployed are not restored to work in private industry, then we may look with apprehension to the future."

The speaker said: "It is the duty of the business men of the country to support the President's program," and declared that domestic and world prices have improved and unemployment figures have been reduced.

"The greatest potential factor in stimulating employment" was seen by Mr. Harriman as "the building and rehabilitation of homes for the American people."

Conservative estimates indicate that 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 people are living in inadequate houses. . . . Great as was the task of pulling America out of the mud and putting it on wheels, the task of pulling our country out of inadequate tenements and slums and putting it in decent homes is far greater, far finer and far more splendid in its effect upon our National life."

PWA $328,000 Grant Is Attacked in Court.

Pineville, Ky., March 13 (AP).—An injunction to prevent the City of Middlesboro from getting a $328,000 PWA loan and grant to build its own electric light and distribution system is sought by the Kentucky Utilities Co. as the latest step in a legal fight between the city and the corporation.

When the city council refused recently to renew the company's franchise, the company announced it would discontinue lighting service to the city unless it paid back bills over which there was a dispute, and refuse to pay its taxes.

The city enjoined the suspension by posting bond and then seized the company's property for the taxes, but was ordered to return that pending final settlement.

When he learned his wife's papers were irregular and, therefore, her appeal from detention was not valid, Switz withdew his own appeal. Both will make another attempt for release before an investigating magistrate tomorrow.

Ohio Will Deport Aliens on Relief To Lighten Cost

Columbus, Ohio, March 13 (AP).—A repatriation plan to return between 8,000 and 10,000 aliens to the border of Mexico or the port of embarkation and save the Ohio relief commission approximately $200,000 per month, has been placed in operation.

The first movement of aliens will start in 14 counties of northwestern Ohio, where thousands of Mexicans have been concentrated in sugar beet fields, and, according to Maj. E. O. Braught, now form a tremendous burden on relief rolls.

Braught said that the agreement of the aliens will be sought in the moving. They will not be forced to move, he said.

Mrs. Roosevelt Trip Near End

Spends Busy Day; Plans to Fly Back to U. S. at Dawn Tomorrow.

Ponce, Puerto Rico, March 13 (AP). Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt rounded out her studies of housing conditions, child feeding and needlework in this island today, but found time to think of home.

She prepared for a return flight to the United States beginning at dawn Thursday, and sent birthday greetings to her 2-year-old granddaughters, Sarah Delano Roosevelt, at Brookline, Mass., and to her son John, who is 18 today.

The first lady and her party drove from San German to Ponce, and saw fine old family residences, a hospital and boys' school, and had a picnic lunch on the porch of the Governor's summer home at Jajome.

The outstanding event on the day's program was a reception at the La Fortale, a mansion of Gov. Blanton Winship.

She was received today as enthusiastically as she has been before in her West Indies tour.

Kentucky Editor Waits House Vote

Frankfort, Ky., March 13 (AP) The House committee investigating the charge of contempt filed against Vance Armentrout, Louisville Courier-Journal editor, by a lobby investigating committee, will not file its report with the Kentucky House of Representatives until tomorrow, Ferd Gnau, chairman, said.

The special committee gave Armentrout a hearing last night. The committee met today but did not have time to prepare its report.

If Armentrout is held guilty of contempt of the lobby committee, as result of his holding as confidential the name of a letter writer contributing to the "Point-of-View" column in the newspaper, the House will vote upon whether or not to punish him. The maximum penalty would be six months' imprisonment or $1,000 fine for both.

Liquor Board Audit System Work Started

Peery Still Seeking "Best 3 Men" for Virginia Control Group.

Richmond, March 13 (AP).—Although still wrestling with the appointment of the three-member liquor control board, Gov. Peery today started the State auditor on the task of setting up the board's accounting and bookkeeping system.

The Governor continued his search for the three "best men available" for the operation of the new Virginia alcoholic beverage control system under the law which becomes effective Thursday of next week.

Asserting the appointment of the members was the greatest task of his administration, the Governor reiterated his statement that upon the personnel of the board depends the success of Virginia's new temperance venture.

Answering criticism aimed at the fact that the personnel of the board has not yet been announced, the Governor said, "We are trying to avoid mistakes inevitably made in hurried action."

Announcement by Peery that the State auditor had been requested to work out the bookkeeping and accounting system for the board, which probably will be used in all State dispensaries, also, was the first public notice of concrete action since the bill was passed and signed a week ago.

The law gives the board broad powers both in the direction of the State dispensaries for hard liquor and in the licensing of private licensees for the sale of wines and beers.

Another incidental problem which the Governor faced today was finding office space for the board and its staff.

Leonardtown, Md., March 13 (Spl.). From stem to stern, from keel to peak, Leonard Calvert's ship, The Ark, will be exactly duplicated when the tercentenary exercises at St. Marys City are held in June.

Mr. Earle said the ship will be fitted out with navigation instruments of three centuries ago.

The Maryland Women's Federation of Garden Clubs will visit St. Marys City May 5 to see the site of Maryland's first settlement. At this time plans will be evolved for the part the federation will play in the tercenterary celebration.

By Marion Butler.

To Charlemagne the Great, King of the Franks and Roman Emperor of the West in the eighth century, many of Maryland's first settlers and their descendants today can trace their lineage, according to Mrs. Rowena Holmes I'Anson, of Washington.

Formerly of St. Marys County, Md., and herself a descendant of Leonard Calvert's Colonists, Mrs. I'Anson has spent weeks in the Library of Congress verifying this information, which in view of its tercentenary appropriateness should be of interest to many Southern Maryland families. She declares:

"It is my belief that if many old Maryland families took time to trace back their ancestry, numbers would find they are of royal descent. Some could follow their forebears through Ark and Dove settlers seven or eight centuries to the first Kings of France—Hugh Capet, Charles II, Louis II; or in England to King Edward I, called the English Justinian; or in Germany to the Emperor, Henry I.

"Although not as much ancestral research has been conducted in Maryland as in Virginia, I believe as many Marylanders have royal blood in their veins as have the descendants of the Cavaliers."

Mrs. I'Anson chanced upon her information while making a study of her own family history, in connection with the first colonists of Maryland. She is a descendant of Capt. Richard Smith, Surveyor General of Maryland in 1693, and Lady Maria Joanna Somerset, grandniece of Cecil Calvert and his wife, Anne Arundel, for whom Anne Arundel County was named, and granddaughter of Lord Baltimore's sister-in-law, Lady Mary Somerset, for whom Somerset County was named.

Capt. Smith's father, Lieut. Richard Smith, according to original old records at Annapolis, was a lawyer in Calvert's band who practiced before the provincial court at St. Marys City, where he was commissioned Attorney General in 1657, and served in the General Assembly from 1658 to 1660. When his son married in 1697 at Christ Church, still standing today in Calvert County, he bequeathed him the estate of St. Leonard's on the Patuxent River.

MRS. ROWENA H. I'ANSON.

Traced Other Families.

From these first settlers of Maryland, Mrs. I'Anson was able to trace her own ancestry back to Charlemagne through the lines of Lord John Somerset and Lady Mary Arundel, and also was able to trace this royal lineage in the following Maryland residents of today:

Mrs. S. Reeder Sutton, of the colonial mansion Somerset on historic Three Notch Road in St. Marys County; Col. Garland Fay, owner of the old Colonial estate of Mulberry Fields on the Potomac; Lieut. R. Stoddard, of Baltimore; Albert Gantt, of Bowie; Marshall Gantt, of Delaware, formerly of St. Marys County and the colonial estate of Bashford on Chaptico Bay; Mrs. Laura Holmes and Ashby Burroughs, of Mechanicsville; Bruce Burroughs, of Brandywine; Gonzales Hodges, formerly of the colonial estate, Willow Glen, of the Wicomico River; L. Locke Holmes, of Oakley; Frank Neale Holmes, of Washington; A. B Holmes, of Mechanicsville; Mrs. C. F. Burkholder and Mrs. Cornelius Morris, of Washington; Mrs. B. A. Edelen, jr., of Bryantown; Mrs. J. Roland Duke, of Leonardtown; Mrs. Johnson Colton, of Washington; Leonard Neale Burroughs, of Baltimore, together with many descendants of the family of Demetrius Cobd Hodges, of St. Marys County, and the descendants, of two well-known seventeenth century Calvert County citizens, Samuel and Young Parran.

Hanging on the wall of Mrs. I'Anson's home at 3714 Thirteenth street northwest is a chart in red and gold lettering, embossed with the ancient Somerset coat of arms, with its motto "Faith for Duty" and its unicorns and fleur de lis. Opposite is the Arundel coat of arms, bearing an owl, a lion, six swallows, and the inscription "Given by God." On the lower portion of the page is the Maryland seal of 1658.

Painted by Mrs. I'Anson's daughter, Miss Nannie A. I'Anson, a member of the District Bar, the chart covers 11 centuries in the history of the I'Anson family back to Charlemagne. Of it Mrs. I'Anson says:

"As an interesting and instructive personal observance of tercentenary year, many old Maryland families would find it well worth their while to look up their ancestral lines and preserve them for the future in some such manner.

Originally of Leonardtown, Mrs. I'Anson still keeps a summer home there and is well known throughout St. Marys County.

A. T.&T. Warns Wire Bill Perils Phone Service

Gifford Cites Investment Rights, Attacks Rigid Public Control.

permission from the Federal commission. He based this argument on the assertion that every telephone line is an interstate line when it is used to make an interstate call. He pointed out that even setting up of emergency circuits would be delayed for weeks, whereas they ordinarily are set up in hours.

In the District of Columbia alone, he said, over 47,000 telephones were connected in 1933. Under the bill, he declared, it would be necessary to obtain permission of the Government in each instance.

Gives Power Over Every Act.

The section covering transactions of a communication company would, he said, have the effect of "giving the commission jurisdiction over practically every activity and every act of the management." He said these things are purely a question of management and do not come within the powers of the Government.

"This section of the bill," he said, "goes very far, indeed goes almost the whole way, toward substituting public management in place of public regulation. It would introduce a regime of management by the Government of privately owned communication systems, that is, a regime of public management and private ownership."

Gifford told the committee that nearly $5,000,000,000 of investment and 270,000 employes are devoted to the furnishing of telephone service in the Bell system. He added that there are 681,000 stockholders of whom 381,000 are women, and that no individual owns as much as one-fifth of 1 per cent of the stock.

"There are interconnected in the United States," he said, "approximately 16,600,000 telephones of which 13,163,000 are Bell telephones.

"Regulation is not new to us. From the beginning we have welcomed it. We are now regulated by 45 State commissions, many municipalities and by the Interstate Commerce Commission. I suppose, however, that we all agree that there can be such a thing as too much regulation to permit management to function efficiently and with the rapidity constantly needed in a business of this character."

Sarnoff told the committee that "I am here to say that we are heartily in accord with President Roosevelt's recommendation for the creation at this time of a unified Federal communications commission.

"So far as this bill creates that commission and authorizes it to make studies and recommendations, we favor its prompt passage, and I am here to offer you and that commission every form of cooperation our companies can give in making such studies.

"So far as the bill would create new law at this time, and go beyond the suggestions of the President, we do not see how it can avoid raising controversial issues, which I understand the committee desires now to avoid."

Senator Dill (Democrat), Washington, chairman of the committee, declared the telephone business was a monopoly, and said "the whole trouble is that the regulation of telephones has been nil."

Gifford told Dill that the bill conferred on the President a power he had not sought—the power to take over control of communication systems on declaration of a National emergency.

$5 Minimum Pay Restored by Ford departments are now working at least five days a week.

$6 Wage in 1919.

Five years after the Ford Company put into effect its then sensational $5 a day minimum wage, the rate was raised to $6 a day in 1919. That rates prevailed until the "depression dollar" was added in 1929, Ford making the announcement at a White House conference.

Last fall, when the question of whether the company would accept the NRA code was paramount, Ford announced the minimum in his plans then was 50 cents an hour and that the company would have to "live down" to the code minimum of 43 cents an hour in the metropolitan area if it signed the code.

NRA Silent on Ford's Return to $5 a Day

No comment was forthcoming at the National Recovery Administration yesterday on the wage increase at the Ford plant. The National Compliance Board has been investigating charges of Ford employes that the management interfered with their rights of collective bargaining at the company plant in Chester, Pa.

Compliance Director William H. Davis said the Ford increase was no concern of the board. He declared all evidence in the Chester case had been taken and an announcement would be made soon as to what action, if any, the board will take.

Bottle of Wine Just CWA Pay for Week

"But it was only as some one was pulling the cork out of a bottle of champagne which cost more than a CWA worker's weeks' pay." He told Southern relief heads here today.

Touhy Aid Given 99 Years in Jail

trap, laid near suburban La Grange last summer to capture men seeking additional ransom payment for the Factor kidnaping.

Conners, whose bullet-slugged body was found propped against a farmer's fence near here today, was the other man hunted in the La Grange police trap.

Banghart was arrested in Baltimore last February 11 with Costner. In the rooms of the two desperadoes police found an arsenal of guns and ammunition. Also arrested in Baltimore were Mrs. Tommy Touhy, wife of Roger's brother, and Mae Blalock, who had associated with the gang.

Touhy Aid Dies; Hand Grips Cent

Chicago, March 13 (AP).—A sixth Touhy gangster went out of circulation today, blasted to death in apparent vengeance by his former pals, while the law dealt out justice to Basil ("The Owl") Banghart, a seventh member of the once powerful outlaw band.

Charles ("Ice Wagon") Connors was found propped up by a roadside ditch, bullet wounds in his skull, left hand, chest and back. A cent was thrust in his right hand, expensively gloved, as the gangster's sign of contempt.

Police learned with no undue surprise that Frank ("Porky") Dillon and Edward ("Father Tom") McFadden had been in Chicago. They added that fact to reports that Connors had refused financial help to Touhyites in trouble with the law, and arrived at an answer to the killing.

Connors had plenty of money, some of it from a $110,000 mail robbery at Charlotte, N. C., police said.

"Connors had a roll but he wouldn't dig," said Chief of Detectives William H. Shoemaker. "He wouldn't dig up for the trials. He might have guessed what would happen."

Disguised with a long mustache that concealed a tell-tale birthmark, Connors' body lay on a morgue slab for several hours before it was identified. Then came Factor, the kidnap victim, who said, "That's Connors. I know him."

Connors was 54 years old by police computation.

He was the second Touhy gangster slain since the gang held Factor for 12 days last July, and five others have also been accounted for—Willie Sharkey, a suicide in a St. Louis cell; Banghart, sentenced; Touhy, Kator and Schaefer in prison for life.

The other killing victim was Jimmy "Trouble" Tribbles, slain in a labor union squabble last August.

Uncle Hides Factor's Son, 8, From Gang

Los Angeles, March 13 (AP).—Eight-year-old Alvin Factor, son of John (Jake the Barber) Factor, Chicago, was moved to a secret hiding place today by his uncle, Robert Cowan, while authorities investigated a reported plot to abduct the boy.

A man who attracted Cowan's attention by passing and repassing Cowan's car as he was returning from Palm Springs, Calif., Monday with Alvin, was questioned by authorities but was released.

Detectives under command of Lieut. Leroy Sanderson kept a close guard over the Cowan home Monday night. Alvin and his mother arrived here recently from Chicago. The boy was taken to Palm Springs for his health.

As Boy of 10, He First Became Interested in Gas Motors.

(Associated Press.)

It was on a dusty road in Iowa that Clarence Duncan "Chink" Chamberlin, named yesterday with Orville Wright, Charles A. Lindbergh and others to investigate the Army air-mail, first learned about engines.

He was only 10 years old when his father's ancient "gasoline buggy" stalled near Des Moines, but on that day Chamberlin became interested in the machine "under the hood"—a machine run on the same principles as those with which he broke records and crossed an ocean.

Thirteen years later Chamberlin joined the Army and left the elder Chamberlin's watch repairing shop in Denison. He came back uninjured with a lieutenant's commission in the Air Force, only to fall off a ladder and break both arms while painting his father's barn.

He worked two years with his father and then began his career as a "gypsy" flier, barnstorming the county fairs, rebuilding and selling planes, acting as a test pilot.

The year before he broke the world flight duration record with Bert Acosta and flew to Germany and a new long distance record with Charles Levine, Chamberlin made a forced landing in the yard of the Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia. Guards, prepared for a modern jail delivery, met him with drawn pistols.

Of that flight to Germany, "Chink," now 39, married, mild-mannered and soft-spoken, once said: "They wanted me to fly back, but somebody offered me a suite in a nice big ocean liner. I remembered the flight—and I took the suite."

Reno Elk Have Taker if They Can Walk to Ohio.

Reno, March 13 (AP).—"That boy," Park Superintendent Henry Rietrich said today, "is not so dumb."

"That boy" is Master Richard Lake, aged 10, Galton, Ohio, who recently read a bit in the public prints whech stated Dietrich wanted to trade off four elk in the city zoo for "a couple of cigars." Dietrich received a letter from Richard today. It said, in part:

"I always did want a pair of elk. I will pay the freight on the cigars if you will pay the freight on the elk. Write me so I can send the cigars when I hear from you that you will pay the freight on the elks."

Direct Subsudy Sought to Aid U. S. Shipping

used as a factor in computing the amount of subsidy awarded."

In his accompanying letter, Roper explained the new system of subsidies would be passed on through a joint committee of experts, representing Government departments having a direct interest in development of the merchant marine. He mentioned the Commerce, State, Treasury and Navy Departments, but asked that the Commerce Department administer contracts once entered into.

The recommendations followed increasing Congressional opposition to ocean mail subsidies that date back in this country to 1845. Last session the Senate defeated a motion to eliminate the ocean mail subsidy provision from the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill by only a four-vote margin.

The year before he broke the world flight duration record with Bert Acosta and flew to Germany and a new long distance record with Charles Levine, Chamberlin made a forced landing in the yard of the Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia. Guards, prepared for a modern jail delivery, met him with drawn pistols.

Of that flight to Germany, "Chink," now 39, married, mild-mannered and soft-spoken, once said: "They wanted me to fly back, but somebody offered me a suite in a nice big ocean liner. I remembered the flight—and I took the suite."

Reprisals are Feared.

"Objections offered to the preferential tariff policy rest not so much on any doubt as to its efficacy as upon a fear that such a course would lead to reprisals by other countries," the report stated.

Growing "obsolescence" of the fleet; inadequate provision for replacements, prevalence of "wasteful" practices in the industry, and "overconservatism" in Government regulation, were cited as "a few of the causes which have impaired the competitive position of American vessels in the foreign trade."

Urging a "sound program of rationalization," the report favored:

More effective use of conference agreements and of other regulatory powers delegated by Congress.

Better coordination between shipping and other forms of transportation, as well as coordination of Government agencies dealing with the Merchant Marine.

Abolition of excessive costs assessed against shipping enterprises by parent companies, subsidiaries and affiliates.

Of the three new types of ship subsidies proposed, replacing the present ocean mail contract system, the suggested "shipbuilding cost differential subsidy" would be paid to a shipowner, either as a lump sum on completion of a ship, or in fixed installments, binding the owner to operate in a designated service under the American flag.

The second new classification of "operating cost differential subsidies" would be granted to operators of American Flag vessels in foreign trade who contract with the Government to maintain stipulated service over a fixed period, based on differentials handicapping the American operator.

New Field Allowance.

The third new classification of "trade penetration" subsidies would take into account disadvantageous conditions surrounding ship operators who compete for trade in new fields. Allowance would be made for lesser cargoes and other handicaps in competing with entrenched foreign lines.

According to Postoffice Department figures, the "differential favoring vessels of American registry" in the 1933 fiscal year amounted to $25,228,463. Since the World War concentrated attention on the decline in the American Merchant Marine, there has been an increased cry for subsidy to compensate for higher construction costs in this country, higher wages, and to compete with subsidized foreign lines.

Largely meeting this demand, the Merchant Marine act in 1920 authorized "just and reasonable" compensation to American lines for carrying the mails, and the Jones-White act of 1928 provided a higher scale of postal rates and loans for new construction.

Earle Resigns Post in Vienna

George H. Earle was said authoritatively yesterday to have resigned as United States Minister to Austria in order to run for Governor of Pennsylvania, the Associated Press reported.

He plans to return soon to the United States to begin an active campaign.

Earle was in this country on leave discussing his candidacy for Governor when civil war broke out in Austria.

He immediately returned to Vienna and has remained there until he felt the situation had returned to normal.

Vienna, March 13 (AP).—George H. Earle, United States Minister to Austria, today sent his resignation to President Roosevelt asking that he be released immediately in order to return to active politics in Pennsylvania.

Earle said he planned to sail March 27 from Hamburg aboard the S. S. Washington for New York.

County Hospital Treats 83 Patients

Woman's Board Receives February Reports.

A report on the CWA painting and repair project at the Montgomery County, Md., General Hospital was made at a meeting of the woman's board, following a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Lionel C. Probert.

Miss Elizabeth Jones, hospital superintendent, reported 83 patients were admitted during the past month, 29 on the free list. The benefit supper will be held July 31, it was decided.

A committee under Mrs. Mahlon Kirk 4th, presented the new by-laws, which were accepted. The Howard County Auxiliary reported 3,851 surgical dressings made in the last month.

A committee, with Mrs. Maurice J. Stabler as chairman, was appointed to name ten members each month to inspect the hospital.

"Ode to Misery" Offered in Divorce Suit.

Dallas, Tex., March 13 (U.P.).—Jack R. Hill said it in poetry when his wife, Ruby Hill, filed suit for divorce. In 31 stanzas of verse Hill explained the sad plight of his marital venture and asked Judge W. M. Taylor to grant the decree.

Judge Taylor looked over the poetry and acquiesced. Two of the stanzas follow:

"She did not care for a home
And things that ought to be,
She loved the vanity of the day
And the thoughts of being free.

"He tried so hard to make things go
For a home and a loving wife,
But she could not seem to understand
And thus the hell and strife."

Stratosphere Test Made by Balloon Without a Crew

Leningrad, U. S. S. R., March 13 (AP).—Russian scientists inaugurated an experiment in stratosphere flights yesterday by sending aloft an "automatic" balloon which burst by prearrangement, at a height of about 10 miles, and released scientific instruments.

Without a human crew, the balloon, consisting of one envelope containing hydrogen, and carrying an automatic wireless recording device and other instruments, took off yesterday.

Wireless reports showed the bag reached its maximum altitude two hours after being released. At 10 miles the temperature was 55 degrees below zero, centigrade.

Thereupon the balloon burst. A parachute carried the instruments to earth. Reports tonight said these landed safely, possibly somewhere in Finland.

Scientists announced the test will be extended by sending aloft another "automatic" stratostat, lifted by two envelopes, capable of taking it up to previously unexplored heights.

"We Are Not Amused."

We thought the eminent Victorians and their customs had all been laid away in lavender. But we were wrong. Hard on the heels of the dispatch telling of the return of snuff in England, comes an article in one of the London dailies about a lady phrenologist. What's coming over London these days? It seems to be going completely haywire, don't you know. It throws a Labor party into power, takes snuff and applauds a frenzied phrenologist when she tells the Royal College of Surgeons that young ladies should never marry men with flat heads.

We were sure phrenology had passed out along with mesmerism, fletcherism, and all the other harmless "isms" of another era. But again, we were wrong. Of course, like Will Rogers, all we know is what we read in the papers, but the article about phrenology was by F. G. Prince-White, secretary of the British Phrenological Society, so we can not doubt it. The phrenologist warned girls against marrying men whose heads are flat on top. "He definitely is not the ideal husband. He has tremendous conceit of himself and swaggers along, his whole personality shouting, 'See what a fine fellow I am!' Shun him, girls!" London bachelors will probably now revive the Roundheads. It seems the Cavaliers are out of the picture. And what German girls are going to do is hard to say.

Day by day evidence piles up that we are returning at least to the nineties. We shall present no more of this reactionary trend. We surrender to Queen Victoria, gracefully. But, like her, we are not amused.

LaGuardia And The Jobless.

Confronted with the termination, on April 1, of CWA payments for 160,000 of New York's unemployed, Mayor LaGuardia has come out in favor of legislation establishing a nation-wide unemployment insurance system. He has written to the Conference of Mayors to bring pressure for such legislation, and certainly none are in better position than those executives to know the need of some system of unemployment relief more permanent, and more intelligent, than the CWA program.

Establishment of unemployment insurance at this time is, of course, somewhat similar to application for life insurance after an unfavorable report from the doctor. The time to establish such a system, as Mr. LaGuardia admits, was ten years ago, when regular premiums paid by those at work would have built up a sizable fund for distribution during the depression period.

The method which the mayor suggests—compulsory contributions from all employed persons and from employers in respect to those who are working for them—is far from satisfactory. If the money thus collected is used to build up a fund to protect those now at work against the risk of unemployment, there will obviously be nothing available to relieve those already without work. And if the contributions are for the benefit of the latter class alone the scheme is not unemployment insurance at all, but a special tax on industry which would tend to make employers contract rather than expand pay rolls.

To say that Mr. LaGuardia's suggestion is unscientific is not to say that it should be dismissed, however. Some alternative less wasteful and expensive than the CWA should be evolved before those cared for under that scheme are thrown on the streets. That employers and employed persons should share the costs, and the control, of such a system with the Government has been regarded as axiomatic in all countries where unemployment insurance has been developed. The Mayor of New York does not seem to have thought his plan through, but he is at least thinking, which is more than can be said for what preceded inauguration of the CWA experiment.

Coordinated Regulation.

When regulated business is brought into competition with unregulated business, the regulated group is unfairly handicapped. Eventually it becomes necessary to remove inequalities either by sweeping away the restrictions or by extending and strengthening the regulations. Our railroads, as Coordinator Eastman says, are now subject to a very comprehensive system of Federal regulation, whereas other transportation agencies are regulated "much less thoroughly, and to a considerable extent not at all, by the Federal Government." It follows that the railroads must be given relief either through a relaxation of restrictions or an extension of control to include other transportation agencies.

Mr. Eastman in presenting these alternatives rejects the first suggestion in favor of comprehensive regulation. He makes specific legislative recommendations applicable to motor bus and water carriers, noting that the so-called self-regulation enforced under recovery codes is not a proper substitute for public regulation.

The evils of unrestrained competition between the railroads of the country have been abundantly shown in the past. As the Eastman report states, regulation was imposed quite as much to cure the ills of such competition as to curb the exactions of monopoly. A continuance of the competitive struggle between railroads and the other common carriers is likewise not in the interests of efficiency or to the advantage of the public at large. No industry can prosper and function to the best advantage when it is partly regulated and partly free. Yet regulation, as we are now beginning to realize, is a remedy which calls for doses of steadily increasing strength.

The Front Line Crumbles.

Racketeering is scarcely too strong a term for the bonus action of the House, which shouted itself hoarse to impress the veterans' lobby while passing the imperative responsibility for defeating this measure to the Senate and the President. And it is worthy of record that this attempt to sabotage the national credit brought the largest turnout of votes yet recorded for the Seventy-third Congress. Of the 432 members of the House, only 7 failed to record themselves either for or against the measure. Not once during the passage of all the important emergency legislation that went through in the special session did so many Representatives take the trouble to align themselves. The forthcoming elections, of course, were responsible for this turnout and for the motion of Mr. Patman obtaining unanimous consent to extend remarks on the bonus bill during the next five legislative days.

There was a larger vote on the bonus than on the invalidation of the gold clause, the industrial recovery act, the agricultural adjustment act and the act to curtail the civil service regulations, all matters involving vital matters of principle. Even the legalization of beer, for which there was gala attendance, brought forth seven fewer votes than did the bonus measure. In other words, the veterans' lobby did its work well, so well that the 74 Democrats and 51 Republicans who voted against the bill seem deserving of strong congratulation for showing the courage and common-sense which should have been expected as axiomatic from a majority of both parties.

Disgraceful at any time, this surrender of the House to a powerful lobby is particularly deplorable when parliamentary institutions are being thrown right and left into the discard. The salvation of democratic principles depends upon courageous legislative opposition when the Executive oversteps its Constitutional prerogative, and similarly courageous support when the executive is defending vital national interests against self-seeking groups within the body politic. A House of Representatives which is pusillanimous when it should oppose, and which opposes when it should support, is no asset to a democracy.

The surrender of the House has abandoned only one of the triple line of defenses which the founders of this Republic reared against just such organized raids of privilege as took place Monday. The Senate is far less likely to be driven into abject surrender. And behind the Senate lies the promised Presidential veto. Fortunately it is not entirely within the power of the House of Representatives to bring our form of government into contempt. But, as demonstrated, it is all too easy for a majority of the House to be indifferent on the subject.

The Parole Board Tangle.

Dr. Loren B. Johnson's resignation as chairman of the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole is regrettable, yet it may result in action breaking the stalemate in which this important District agency is caught. Since its creation in July, 1932, the board has been unable, for want of an appropriation, fully to carry out the functions assigned to it. The members have concluded, as Dr. Johnson says, that it is "useless and perhaps harmful" to continue operating without an adequate staff of experts. Dr. Emmett J. Scott also intends to resign unless the situation is changed.

This state of affairs is especially unfortunate because the last two Administrations have sought to establish a scientific parole system in the District. Congress passed legislation to this end, but forgot to provide funds to make it effective. As the law stands it provides that funds may be taken from the budgets of penal institutions in the District for the payment of parole officers' salaries and administrative expenses of the board. No allowance is made, however, for a parole executive, a psychiatrist, sociologist, educational director or other experts to follow up parole cases. Thus permanent rehabilitation of prisoners is neglected. Members of the board—who contribute their services without pay—feel that it is impossible to carry out the terms of the act until they are permitted to organize an appropriate staff.

In the last analysis Congress is responsible for this broad gap between the theory of the parole act and the provisions for its administration. But Congress can hardly be expected to take the initiative in matters of this kind. Some recommendations should have been forthcoming from the District Building. The parole board has repeatedly brought the matter to the attention of the Commissioners, but they have taken the attitude that "it would be impracticable at this time to add to the budget estimates." Of course, the Commissioners had to balance this request for additional funds against many other financial demands, but they certainly have not been aggressive in bringing the issue before the Budget Bureau and Congress.

Some officials believe that a change in the basic law is necessary before the parole board can set up the scientific organization it has planned. Apparently no one has taken the responsibility of investigating this angle of the case. Why shouldn't the board itself take the initiative in formulating the proper amendment, if one is needed, instead of leaving the matter to the Commissioners, who after all are rather busy men.

Regardless of the blame for this impasse, further delay can be avoided only if a constructive plan parole system for Washington is laid before Congress at its present session.

In A Planned Economy.

Secretary Dern seeks to guard against future accidents by organizing a committee of aeronautic experts to advise the Army with regard to transportation of the air mail. The Administration is rightly concerned over the safety of Air Corps pilots, thus manifesting a most desirable change of attitude. Yet the prospective investigation will be futile so far as the reestablishment of a sound, permanent air-mail system is concerned.

The reasons for the high accident rate among Army pilots flying the mail are obvious. Aside from inclement weather, the chief factors undoubtedly are lack of experience in this type of flying, and lack of proper equipment. Since the transportation of mail by the Army is only a temporary job, the desirability of purchasing suitable planes and of training pilots adequately for this work is open to question. A more direct and satisfactory solution of the emergency would be to award temporary bids to private companies.

It is now generally agreed that the present controversy can not be disposed of until private operators are again carrying the mail. The Administration took this view by submitting to Congress a bill providing that contracts should once more be awarded on the basis of competitive bidding. Even if that measure should be adopted, however, it may be nine months or a year before the air-mail system will again be operating efficiently. This measure would allow companies six months to prepare themselves for operations after contracts are awarded. It was drawn before President Roosevelt temporarily grounded all mail planes and postal officials worked out a plan for curtailed operations to avoid unnecessary hazards. And it does not meet the emergency now apparent.

Secretary Dern is anxious to make the best of a difficult situation. But what action does Postmaster General Farley contemplate to lift the air-mail system out of the quagmire to which he voluntarily consigned it? The network of air lines which the Government has developed at great cost during the last decade is rapidly disintegrating. The public can no longer rely upon expeditious transportation of mail by plane. If Congress should pass the bill now under consideration, another era of pioneering to develop an efficient air transport system would doubtless be necessary. Especially is this true in view of the provisions designed to prevent future bidding by any company which makes claims against the Government as a result of Mr. Farley's sweeping cancellation order.

Yet Mr. Farley has offered no plan to save the air-mail system from collapse. The emergency must be met in some way by Congress without any constructive aid from the Postmaster General, strange as that situation may seem under a "planned economy."

Net Gain?

Even as the Administration is engaged in its clean-up campaign the politicians have stolen a march on the White House. Mrs. Bernice S. Pyke, Democratic National committeewoman for Ohio, has slipped into the position of collector of customs for her home State. What is the gain in encouraging some office-holding committeemen and committeewomen to give up their posts if new appointments are to be made from the same group?

After national committeemen are well established in Washington as lobbyists, formal relinquishment of party office does not detract from their influence. Likewise, when a politician is awarded a patronage post, mere severance of official party connection means little. If lucrative positions continue to go to members of the Democratic National committee, whether they retain or relinquish their party offices, the entire campaign to minimize politics in the Federal service will shortly become farcical.

COL. THEODORE ROOSEVELT and other members of his expedition arrived at Barao de Melgaco, on their way to Mananos, capital of the State of Amazonas, which lies on the Rio Negro, 10 miles from its junction with the Amazon River.

THE PRESIDENT AND MRS. WILSON announced the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor Randolph Wilson, to the Hon. William Gibbs McAdoo.

REPRESENTATIVE FRANK PARK, of Georgia, introduced a bill which would authorize the President to buy the northern part of Mexico and thus solve the Mexican problem.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE NEW soldier bonus bill was ordered sent to the House and a plan was agreed upon by the House Ways and Means Committee to push it forward under a suspension of rules to permit a vote in one day and to prevent amendments. The total cost of the measure was estimated to be about $2,119,000,000.

THE SENATE, despite President Coolidge's indorsement, refused by a vote of 41 to 32, to authorize a loan of $50,000,000 to farmers of the spring wheat belt to finance their start in poultry, swine and other live stock industries.

An Appeal to the Veterans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My earnest plea to all veterans is: Do not take the bonus at this time, for while it is undoubtedly due us morally, let's show that we have the interest of the country at heart. Even though the form of Government has been changed to that of dictatorship and constitutional rights voided, let's refrain from giving the experimenters a chance to lay the collapse of the Nation's credit to the payment of the bonus. For while the two billion the veterans would get would not be the controlling factor, it would be used as the alibi by the politicians. Let's show our patriotism and demand a delay in the granting of the adjusted service certificates until a later date. INJUSTICE.

The Pursuit of Happiness.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been much interested in the series of articles, "The New Dealers," but this morning I was amazed at the following statement:

"As a result of these two forces, six months after Congress had appropriated $25,000,000 to be expended under the direction of the President for the establishment of 'subsistence homesteads'—dwellings equipped with gardens sufficient to enable a worker to grow food for his family after factory hours.'" Is it possible that we have reached the place in America where the best the Government has to offer the man who puts his regular hours in at a factory is a garden where he can go out and toil in an effort to try to raise food to feed his family? What about the wages paid this man? Why does not the Government see to it that this man is paid wages enough so that he can take the needed rest and recreation during his off hours that are rightly his?

Is it not about time to throw out the whole bunch of New Dealers, if this is the best they can think out for the laboring man, and return to the Declaration of Independence, which reads as follows: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." D. PAUL ZIEGLER.

Theft in High Places.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It begins to appear that disgust with theft in high places was the greatest moving force in Roosevelt's election. That honor and honesty of purpose are an obsession with him has never been questioned since the removal from office of New York City's most popular mayor.

Correlation of pre and post election happenings convinces me that the reversal of 13,000,000 votes meant a drive for National honesty, and the sloughing-off of the barnacles of laxity in American jurisprudence and the deplorably low standard of ethics of our National life. We appear to need a National moral house-cleaning.

A number of Roosevelt's predecessors were of notably strong moral fiber. Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt and Wilson stand out preeminently among them. Plainly they subscribed to the lofty theory that no President of the highest honor will sit at a Cabinet table or in council with any man of loose moral structure. Graft, that he so hates, will challenge the President's endurance in a task that the gods themselves would find appalling.

Why Take It So Hard?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You have given much space to the imbecility of men and their hats. Why are men so self-conscious? You don't find women writing to the paper in such foolish morbidness. If she wants to take off her hat or anything else for that matter—she just does it.

In a crowded elevator who is looking at the man, or caring a whoop whether his hat is on or off—and all the time the timid soul is wondering "should I, or shouldn't I?"

Self-consciousness is a painful disease. It is curious to look at a quiet, apparently self-contained man in an elevator, and realize that with his hat on or off, he is suffering an agony of doubt. The season is approaching when he will be writing to you about his desire to go without his coat. It will never occur to him to just take it off.

Men sitting down in crowded street cars go through the same agony (neither hats nor coats bother them here). They sit, but they keep their eyes downcast or look furtively out the windows. Why take it so hard?

Feeding Birds and Animals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to thank all the papers for the fine interest displayed in the recent blizzard's bird and animal feeding problem. I personally called up three papers asking that the feeding of whole wheat bread wherever possible to birds and leaving open garage cans for cats and dogs be suggested, and in every instance received most courteous attention and prompt response next day in form of a prominently placed and well-worded appeal.

One blizzard does not make a winter. There may be more coming. Let us be prepared and not fail our dumb friends and helpers. The Animal Relief and Humane Education League would like to maintain an honor roll for those who feed animals and birds, and would be glad to receive names of those who regularly or in emergencies do it. Names and addresses, remarks and suggestions may be sent to league headquarters, 322 E street northeast.

VIRGINIA W. SARGENT,
President Animal Relief and Humane Education League.

The "New Morality."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Before rushing into print I would suggest that your correspondents inform themselves fully regarding the real and not the alleged purposes of those seeking to make birth control available to all.

Their concern is not the overburdened mother, as claimed. That merely is window dressing, designed to attract and hold the impressionable many.

As I testified before the House Committee on the Judiciary, and challenged Margaret Sanger to prove otherwise, what their eyes are turned to is what they term the "new morality," which is nothing more than laissez faire in morality.

If they have any success, and I don't think they will, it is a certainty they will return to ask Congress that measures be further liberalized. SAMUEL SALOMAN.

Disabled Officers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent article in The Post relative to legislation concerning pay cuts and veterans' features of the independent offices appropriations bill fails to disclose its author, but his or her assertion that "the amendments which upset the apple cart were * * * and, especially, the amendment modifying restrictions on World War emergency officers," is devoid of warrant or justification.

It manifests a carelessness or wanton recklessnes, and prejudice. The truth is that these officers and their sponsors are not asking benefits for any presumptives, but solely for those whose disabilities, incurred in line of duty, are established by official and hospital records. Even the exaggerated estimate of the present cost of rendering this long delayed justice does not exceed three million. These officers were chiefly doctors, engineers and lawyers who were formerly successful practitioners in civil life, and, by reason of their service absence from their professional work and their service incurred disabilities, have experienced irreparable financial losses. They were promised, by the President and Congress, that they would be accorded the same rights, privileges and immunities as officers of the regular establishments. Army General Order 47 expressly stated there was only one Army, the National Army.

The Navy was fair enough to place most of its volunteer officers, who had become disabled in service, on its regular retired list. The Army reniged. The so-called economy act, under the inspiration of a few who either rendered no military service or were not victims of any physical or financial losses, struck the unfairest and most inexcusable blow at this relatively small and helpless group by providing for review of D. E. O. cases and compliance with new regulations of the Veterans' Administration. In this subtle manner the "causative factor" infernal device was invented and has been brutally applied. Its use has thrown off a very large number of meritorious cases, except combat injuries. No such dark page of military history was ever written in this or any other civilized country.

DISABLED VOLUNTEER OFFICER

Washington, Mar. 1.

Controlled Forests.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I agree that the move by the New Dealers at Washington to bring all the forest land, and even the wood lots, under the control of the Bureau of Forestry is one of the basically important moves of the Administration. It is a recognition of the National trend in thought—that "land" is a communal affair, and that timber is one of the important National resources.

However, it is strange that The Post failed to remember that Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania is the man who started this movement, way back in the nineties. Gov. Pinchot, backed by Theodore Roosevelt, fought the fight in Congress and against the interests which were then destroying our timber. The present Bureau of Forestry is largely the work of Gifford Pinchot, but a little thing like that is not worth remembering when it is customary for Americans to honor millionaires who got theirs by exploiting the National resources.

The move is important. Think how many new jobs for skilled foresters and for trained animal wardens, and for the new kind of lumber cutters, who won't destroy four times as much timber as they use!

Taxi, Sir—Taxi?

Postoffice, Wednesday.

There are certain classes that are denied the Governmental and other attention due them. We have heard how, under our present regime, America's most prominent example is the Great Middle Class, or what remains thereof. Anyway, you will agree that one class is the class you belong to, whatever class you belong to.

We refer today, however, to members of what the sociologists would disagreeably dub "an occupational group:" Taxi drivers in general, Washington's in particular. We believe the local species to be the most friendly of the genus.

* * * *

This opinion isn't due to the fact that we can afford to know Washington's taxi-chauffeurs better than any others: Washington's are really more knowable. The Capital's fares are, indeed, cheap, but, until the dollar began to be protected, Paris fares were cheaper. Well, the Parisian drivers carry the democratic principle almost too far.

They not only believe in, they practice, the Republic's official declaration for "Libery, Equality, Fraternity." They are at liberty to change their minds en route about taking you to the place they agreed to take you. They maintain that they are so completely anybody's equal as to be everybody's superior. And their fraternity is much more exclusive than the D. K. E. or the D. A. R.

Ask a Parisian taximan to drive you more than ten blocks after 10 p. m.; he will tell you that the address you give him is not in the direction of his own residence. When he wants to take a drink, he parks his cab at the busiest of neighboring corners, and leaves it there with a little black hood over its flag like the black hood on the man who has just entered the execution-room. When the Parisian taxi-driver wants to smoke a cigarette over his copy of Paris-Midi—when he wants to take his afternoon nap—whenever he wants to show the world that he is a true-blue Parisian taxi-driver—he rams that little black hood over this flag—and then just you try to make him take you anywhere!

* * * *

The Berlin driver has become a mute, for fear Hitler may overhear him. Contrarywise, the Italian is insufferably horn-noisy; being an Italian, he loves noise—musical noise if possible, but noise at any price. We have always found the London lads and their Manhattan cousins too intent upon getting their next customer, have always suspected the Chicago boys of gang affiliations, and we have never yet been able to find a taxi in Philadelphia.

But in Washington——

* * * *

When we lately took up our official residence in the Capital, we took up a taxi. We said:

"Drive us to The Washington Post."

"Sure," said the driver. "You know," he said, "I'm from Los Angeles, but I'm an old Army man and I married a Washington girl, and we've lived here 12 years. Both children born here. Well, other day, I was driving Congressman Whoozit, and he said, 'There's more taxicabs in Washington than in New York. With the fares you fellows have to charge, I don't see how you make a living. A newspaper like The Post ought to write about it.'"

* * * *

Next morning we asked a taximan outside our hotel to drive us to the office of The Post. He said:

"Sure." He said: "We got a paper by that name in Denver, where I come from. But I'm an ex-Service man; married a Washington girl 10 years ago and been here ever since, us and our three children. I's driving Senator Quiest last week, and he said, 'there's over 6,000 taxis in this town and only 4,000 in Chicago. With all that competition, you boys must near starve. You ought to get The Washington Post to get fares raised.'"

* * * *

There followed the allegedly special taxi-friends of Secretary Swanson and Mr. Justice Roberts.

Within the ensuing week, we were driven in taxis engineered by Virginians and Vermonters, North Carolinians and South Dakotans. We were driven by one Pennsylvanian, one Rumanian and one Filipino.

They had all served in the Army; excepting the last two, they had all married Washington girls—which was quite as laudable as everything else concerning them.

Commercial treaties featuring the Most Favored Nation Clause had long ago been concluded between everyone of these drivers and personages of weight in some branch of our Government. Each personage had declared himself opposed to Washington's excess taxi supply, each had suggested that the evil be fought, or a fare-raise urged, by the newspaper to or from the office of which we were being driven.

* * * *

And now the discontent nears a crisis. Last night, when we motored from this office to a neighboring hotel, the driver said:

"I'm a Washington man, married to a Washington girl, and every one of our 10 children been born right here. But I never did see taxi competition like what it is now. Why, only yesterday, I was driving Mr. Bargeron down to the Washington Post, and he——"

* * * *

We interrupted. We advised:

"You stop here at the White House and wait a bit. You know, the President likes to get away from all formality occasionally and take a simple taxi ride. What you want to do is to be here the next time he feels like that—and then you get him to have Prof. Moley fight for your cause in Today."

Preview Shows Former Dancer Retains Punch

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is no ordinary "musical" that that agile old hoofer, George White, has turned out in the first film version of his widely celebrated and discreetly denuded "Scandals," previewed yesterday noon in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange by an invited audience that packed the comparatively narrow confines of the toy theater almost to the point of bursting and filled it so full of cigarette smoke that you could have cured a ham in it. Fortunately, however, there were no actors present!

The remarkable resemblance of Mr. Cliff "Ukelele Ike" Edwards to the familiar Holbein portrait of that fine old Tudor celibate, King Henry VIII of England, as revealed during the ribald passages of one of Mr. Edwards' rowdier songs, struck these ancient and case-hardened risibilities as the most comically exciting incident of the picture's entire action.

The only slight defect in Mr. Edwards' otherwise flawless masquerading as the uncouth, but merry, King Hal, was that he neglected to toss his chicken bones over his shoulders to moulder on the carpet, after the manner of Charles Laughton's unkempt and ravenous monarch. But since he seemed to have no dogs growling around the imperial premises, perhaps Mr. Edwards was staying more strictly "in character" than otherwise would have been the case.

Mr. Vallee's Putty Nose!

Next to Ukulele Ike's unexpected resemblance in mood and morals to the monarchial matrimonialist, who also, like the jubilant, yet remorseful, Mr. Edwards, had been done in by the women, the introduction to American audiences of Master Rudy Vallee, the incorrigible and usually impeccable crooner, as a character comedian affecting putty noses and other appurtenances of the art of low comedy suggestive of the slapstick and inflated bladder seemed to me to represent Impresario White's closest approach to complete and unassailable novelty in his production.

Mr. Vallee, as a ballad singer of the gay '90s, and, later, as a Scotch father harassed by the infantile perplexities that also assail Mr. Edwards and Mr. James Don Juan Casanova Schnozzola Durante, while all their wives are out having themselves a time strikes a new note in histrionism—a very new note for his histrionism!

A Very Doggy Scene.

Otherwise, Mr. White's filmed "Scandals" pursues a fairly well-known and highly agreeable course. Some of his spectacular effects are startlingly lovely. There is a dog number, on the other hand, that seemed to me a little too doggy for its own good and once or twice the captivating and cutaneous coryphees gave the fleeting impression of indulging a little too much practically aimless gallumphing about through the spacious expanses of a formal garden to mean much, or get anywhere of importance, but by and large, Georgie White has built himself a show. Make no mistake about that. It has melody, mirth, rhythm and beauty all on its side, together with a cast that is admirably gaited to the tasks with which it finds itself confronted.

One wonders how a deal of the material ever got by the acute ear of Deacon Will H. Hays, but if Mr. White set out to film the "Scandals" he probably felt that he might just as well film the "Scandals"—which is precisely what he did.

The local booking of this ornate jocundity will be some time next month, house and exact date not as yet definitely determined.

On the reverse side of a tropically tinted view of the East Bridge of the Venetian Way, connecting the beach with Belle Isle, Miami Beach, Fla., occur the words, "Joe Morgan, Harry Hunter, our wives and I merge in a grand hello!

"Rudy Berger."

This would be one of the reasons why dramatic editors awaken from time to time to discover that they have torn out most of their hair by the roots from sheer jealousy. Joe Morgan, as goes without saying, was formerly general manager of the Harry M. Crandall theatrical interests in the Washington territory, back when I was mildly involved in the same enterprises; Harry Hunter is Washington branch manager for Paramount and Rudy Berger serves in the same capacity for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Their wives, in case you have not figured it out, would be Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Hunter and Mrs. Berger. Very grand persons all—and I hope their shoulders blister!

Jottings on Jeritza.

With mail orders already being accepted for her engagement at the National in Rudolf Friml's new operetta, "Annina," the week beginning Monday, March 26, it is as well to know a little more than has so far been divulged concerning Mme. Maria Jeritza, distinguished star of the grand opera and concert stages in this country.

Mme. Jeritza in private life is the Baroness von Popper. She is of Moravian birth, having been born in the little town of Brun. Her debut was at Almitz, and in 1912 she went to Vienna. The forces presiding over the destines of the staid old Metropolitan Grand Opera House had her in mind for New York as early as 1914, but the Great War intervened and her debut in this country did not take place until 1921, when she sang in Erich Korngold's "Dead City," in New York, in its first American presentation.

Mme. Jeritza has a fine voice, a commanding presence, and dramatic power of a high order, especially fitting her for the roles of the Northern operas—though she sings with facility, and with splendid intelligence, in those of the Italian and French schools. She is an artist whose sympathies are keen, vivid and inclusive and whose work grows richer and finer as time goes on.

Sang Operettas Abroad.

Although entirely identified with grand opera in this country, the lighter operas are not new to her, she having sung works of Franz Lehar and Johann Strauss during her European opera seasons. Some of the light operas in which she has appeared are "The Merry Widow," "Count of Luxembourg," "Gypsy Baron" and others.

"Annina" has been especially written for Mme. Jeritza, by Rudolf Friml, and is one of the most brilliant scores of this famous composer's long list of successful operettas, not forgetting "The Firefly," "High Jinks," "Katinka," "Rose Marie," "The Vagabond King" and "The Three Musketeers."

Benny Meroff, noted N. B. C. orchestra maestro, who appeared here some months ago to supply the musical background for Eddie Cantor's stage revue and who this week is appearing with his orchestra on a local stage, will make a personal appearance at the Children's Carnival, in the establishment of the Hecht Co., this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The carnival, which will be continued through tomorrow, is patterned after the fairs held every year for the children of Paris. Included among the features is Mickey Mouse, himself, who is the official greeter, and Tom Doerer, sports cartoonist, who has sketched many of the children in attendance. Among the souvenirs given away to the juvenile patrons are taps, marbles, jacks, balloons, masks and buttons. Meroff, by the way, plays 25 musical instruments and is known as the most versatile conductor before the American public.

"Best of the Month."

The March 1 issue of the Will H. Hays brochure listing the "Selected Motion Pictures" for the month, chosen by representative groups of preview organizations covering the entire United States, lists the following as the "Best of the month:"

"Carolina," adapted from Paul Green's "The House of Connelly," with Janet Gaynor and Lionel Barrymore.

"Catherine the Great," the British-made production, cofeaturing Elizabeth Bergner and Douglas Fairbanks, jr.

"David Harum," adapted from the Edward Noyes Westcott novel of about the turn of the century, starring Will Rogers, with Evelyn Venable and Louise Dresser.

Made in Washington.

"Keep 'Em Rolling," with Walter Huston and Frances Dee, made at Fort Myer, Va., late last summer under the working title of "Rodney," from the magazine story by Leonard Jason.

"The Lost Patrol," with Victor McLaglen and a cast composed wholly of male players.

"Once to Every Woman," with Ralph Bellamy and Fay Wray.

"Queen Christina," starring Greta Garbo, with John Gilbert, Ian Keith and Lewis S. Stone.

"You Can't Buy Everything," with May Robson and Jean Parker.

This is a list which, in time, Washington will have completely seen and one with which it will largely have concurred.

Economics Note.

Mr. White Runs True to Form

Abandoning none of the penchant for pulchritude that characterized all of his notable essays at stage revue, George White, the dapper former "hoofer" who became one of the late Flo Ziegfeld's closest Broadway rivals, in the screen version of his "Scandals," previewed in Washington yesterday, still makes valuable use of hordes of beautiful young women, concerning whose physical charms he exercises not too much reticence. These three will give you an idea. They are three out of seemingly that many hundred—or maybe thousand. The celluloid "Scandals" will be shown here next month.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

HERE are some books for browsing. Of course, if you want, you can read them in the time-honored way—a dutiful beginning on page 1 and a patient, plodding advance to the end—just as you can devour your way steadily across a plate of assorted cakes. But I think you'll like them best if you dip into them here and there, nibble and taste at will. If you have a bedside lamp and like to read a few pages before going to sleep, these books were made for you.

With Marquis James' "They Had Their Hour" (Bobbs-Merrill, $2.75), I'd look first at the last story. Out of this collection of episodes from American history, the tale of Dick Yeager, Oklahoma bandit and killer, rises especially fresh and sinewy. When at last they caught Dick, on a Sunday in 1895, he was as full of bullets as a battlefield. They put him in jail and began to count up his probable murders. When the number got to 20, he protested: "That's too dam' strong—I ain't never claimed more'n 'leven!"

An Oklahoman himself, Mr. James was 4 years old when Dick was captured. He grew up with these tall stories thick about him; the account of this book comes from original sources. Two other items Mr. James grants as his own work—one the denial of the fable that John Wilkes Booth escaped from Garrett's barn that April morning in 1865. Claimants to the dubious honor used to appear from time to time, just as the long-lost Dauphin of France haunted the country.

One of the most celebrated was a man named David George, who committed suicide in Mr. James' home town of Enid, left a note that he was Booth, and was for years exhibited as a mummy in the local undertaking parlor. Mr. James hunted down all reports of the escaped Booth and found them false. The identification was complete of that crumpled figure, revolver in left hand, carbine in right, on the floor of the burning barn.

The other story based on first-hand research relates the fall of the Alamo. Mr. James gathered the material in Texas while working on "The Raven," his Pulitzer prize-winning biography of Sam Houston.

But with these exceptions noted, the book makes no claim to originality. Here are the familiar stories of Capt. Kidd, Paul Revere, and John Wilkes Booth, the less familiar ones of the plot to assassinate Lincoln in Baltimore, the stolen railway train in the Civil War, and the Louisiana Lottery. What Mr. James has done, however, is to tell with gusto a number of thoroughly interesting tales which you may have missed in your history schooling.

Lloyds of London was willing to bet 50 to 1 against Bobby Jones' winning the four major golf titles in 1930, and lost to some Atlanta gentlemen to the tune of a quarter-million. But ready to bet on almost anything, Lloyds draws the line at underwriting death, horse racing, and women's fashions.

Of such items and dozens of others, from the tale of Mata Hari to the fact that a laundryman in New York receives a pension of $200 a year from the estate of Charles II, Edwin C. Hill makes a light but readable little book—"The Human Side of the News" (Black, $1). If you have listened to his broadcasts five nights a week, you have heard it all before. He is one of the three or four most popular speakers on the air. In 1933 and 1934, the radio editors of the country voted him as the leading news commentator.

Some of the material comes from his own experiences in newspaper work; much of it shows very plainly the breath of the Britannica. It is all highly colored. You will like it best in small doses.

"It is as much as one's life is worth nowadays among young people," wrote Mr. Edmund Wilson in "Axel's Castle," "to say an approving word for Shelley or a dubious one about Donne."

This modern cult of John Donne is reflected in three of the essays, two of them wholly on the perplexing old Dean of St. Paul's, which are printed in "Essays in Criticism: Second Series" (University of California Press, $2.50). Lovers of Donne will find them extremely interesting.

For other tastes there are essays on Pope as a poet, on the American qualities of Leigh Hunt, on the uses of comic relief in drama, and the reasons for the superiority of Elizabethan tragedy—11 essays in all. The 11 writers are members of the English department at U. C. I can't very well generalize on such varied styles and materials, but it is gratifying to find that the scholarly essay in this country can be at once so informed, keen-witted, and humanly sensible. For if the subjects of these essays are remote from our daily concerns, the conclusions found by the writers are not. The book brings literary criticism close home to all of us.

Only a specialist would read through Prof. Beverly W. Bond's "The Civilization of the Old Northwest: 1788-1812" (Macmillan, $3.50). It is a long, detailed, and scholarly history, showing enormous labor over original sources.

But a judicious dipping into its pages will reward you with facts about whisky shipments on the Ohio River, the contents of early newspapers, the annual allowance of circuit preachers, and such minutiae of frontier life. I can't for one minute say it's exciting; I can't even say it's especially interesting to learn that an evening school in Cincinnati, vintage of 1799, charged $2 for three months' tuition, "scholars to find firewood and candles."

But I can certainly maintain that Prof. Bond's worthy book makes prime reading under a bed lamp.

By Robert Quillen

A certain tired and harassed young lady, appalled by the magnitude of her prenuptial duties, lifted her eyes to heaven and wailed: "How much trouble it is to get married!"

She held forth on this topic for several minutes and then had the wit and wisdom to add: "But it isn't any more trouble than you make it."

What is true of marriage in this particular is equally true of life as a whole.

In the beginning, life is a smooth straight highway leading to the mists of a far horizon. The wayfarer has nothing to do but travel on, with a light burden and a song in his heart.

There may be mishaps that are no fault of his, but such occurrences are rare.

Nine times in ten he could finish the journey full of years and honor, with a clean record and a peaceful mind, if he would observe the simple rules of prudence and decency suggested by other travelers who have gone the same way.

He knows the rules, but he doesn't observe them. Greed or lust or other dishonors tempt him with fair promises, and he stumbles into wayside ditches where unclean things befoul and bruise him.

But in every instance he made the way hard of his own free choice. The highway never changed. Always it lay straight and smooth before him. He invited every fall and every bruise.

In a small town, where one is privileged to know many people intimately and watch each step they take from childhood to old age, life very seldom seems guilty of unfairness.

One can see effect following cause with mathematical certainty. The once-strong man who is dying too soon, the old man ashamed to face the world, the rich man who is despised by the poorest, the gossip whose mind returns to dirt as a sow to her wallow—all without exception made themselves as they are. And bystanders saw what the end would be long before it came.

Say what you will about luck, never yet has a man harvested wheat when he planted oats.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

The Last Days of the Confederacy.

The English poet, William Ernest Henley, the friend of Stevenson, is best known for his poem of defiance, "Out of the Night That Covers Me," which thousands of persons all over the world can repeat. He also wrote the best criticism in verse of Stevenson that has ever appeared, and many other beautiful poems. I like the one with the refrain "Over the Hills and Far Away."

Henley was a cripple; but his lack of bodily activity was more than balanced by the tremendous vigor and vitality of his mind and personality. He was 100 per cent masculine. He delighted in singing praises to the qualities of courage, audacity, fearlessness, and defiance. While it is perhaps strange that an Englishman should have written the finest tribute to the Confederate soldiers of America, it is not at all strange that their spirit of defiance, even in the last days, should have appealed to him with especial intensity. Those who follow a lost cause are not lost themselves. Listen to Henley's tribute to our gallant Southern soldiers.

"Talk of pluck!" pursued the sailor,
Set at euchre on his elbow,
"I was on the wharf at Charleston,
Just ashore from off the runner.

"It was gray and dirty weather,
And I heard a drum go rolling,
Rub-a-dubbing in the distance,
Awful, dour-like, and defiant.

"In and out among the cotton,
Mud, and chains, and stores, and anchors,
Tramped a squad of battered scarecrows,—
Poor Old Dixie's bottom dollar.

"Some had shoes, but all had rifles;
Them that wasn't bald, was beardless;
And the drum was rolling Dixie,
And they stepped to it like men, sir!

"Rags and tatters, belts and bayonets,
On they swung, the drum a-rolling,
Mum and sour. It looked like fighting,

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

IT is a high commentary on the political mind hereabouts that in none of the informal discussion of the income tax action against Mr. Mellon by alleged confreres in sin is the thought entertained for a moment that the Government in making its move really hopes to punish these gentlemen or even collect any back taxes from them. Of course, this view may be wholly wrong. It may be that the Administration is actuated by the highest and purest motives, that, as it contends, politics ceased when it came in.

BARGERON.

This may be the case, but it is a fact that in no quarter hereabouts where matters governmental and political are dissected is it believed to be. One advancing such an idea, indeed, would be looked upon as most naive.

And arguing against the Administration's sincerity is the very plain fact that it got nowhere in the Mitchell case. By and large, the big income returns of the last 20 years have been made out by competent lawyers, lawyers who knew legally how to find holes in a law written by other lawyers. We live under an oligarchy of lawyers, you know.

But while the discussion of the move against Mr. Mellon and the others dismisses at once any thought of sincerity on the part of the Administration, there is a wide range of opinion as to just what its motive was.

Some hold to the belief that it is a pursuance of the campaign of hate on which the present Administration has thrived, a campaign that began with Mr. Roosevelt's promise to run money changers from the temple and has at one time or another in the past year been leveled at most all of those with great wealth. There is some ground for the belief that many thousands of the unemployed have enjoyed the spree of hate more than they would returning to work.

It is worthy of note, I think, that so much heat had been engendered against the wealthy that when Father Coughlin railed against them in New York he probably could have led the mob right down into Wall street on a plundering expedition. He didn't do this, of course. He had nothing like that in mind. But observers at the time commented on the possibility of what would have happened had someone in the crowd struck a match.

• • • •

A more charitable view can be taken of the Administration's action in this instance, however. To me it seems there has been a diminishing of the hate campaign in the past two months. There seems to have been a decided swing toward realization of the fact that it is the so-called wealth malefactors and vested interests that must reemploy men, not the theorists or haters.

My best information and belief is that in this instance the Administration is trying to bolster up respect for the income tax law on the eve of another payment. The disclosures about Mr. Morgan and others of his financial stature not having paid any income taxes for two or three years of the depression did not set well with the rank and file of those who did have to pay.

And the Government can not permit any resultant trifling with the returns due tomorrow. It needs the money. This is the real motive, I am convinced, behind the action against Mr. Mellon and the others at this time.

• • • •

It is true, though, that there is some worry in Administration circles as to whether this will be accepted as the motive, whether it may not have an unfavorable reaction, whether it may not be interpreted as another spleen of hate.

A bad reaction came from the air-mail episode. The Administration doesn't want another one. It is significant that Secretary Dern has been assigned to take Hero Lindbergh into camp.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

THE AIR MAIL AND THE ARMY.

President Roosevelt has curtailed air mail flying by the Army and will award the job to private contractors soon. He realizes that the Army is the home of fighting fliers, not emergency letter carriers.

• • • •

You can't beat our Army airmen in a scrap, but they never planned on being called out of bed in a blizzard to help somebody get a souvenir postal to Aunt Minnie Tuesday noon instead of Wednesday night.

• • • •

We don't decorate our soldiers for conspicuous gallantry in high-speed transmission of letters bearing the important message: "In swimming all day today. Will stay another week. Tell Moe and Jake to look after things."

• • • •

Nothing in the Army traditions or regulations ever called for a soldier's holding himself in constant readiness to get the message, "Having a lovely time; wish you were here," between two points at 150 miles an hour in a raging snowstorm.

• • • •

It was the first major instance of the Administration getting its signals mixed and running the wrong way with the ball, anyhow. It was like suddenly taking the railroads from private operation and putting the Navy in the locomotive cabs.

• • • •

The Army fliers are competent men and brave fighters, but they didn't know the routes, lacked special air-mail equipment and were thrown into a new business under the worst conditions possible.

• • • •

You might as well have fired a veteran business district letter carrier and turned the job abruptly over to a rural free delivery man.

• • • •

It would be just as reasonable in case of war to discharge the Army and Navy and order the letter carriers to hold back the enemy on all fronts if it took the last 2-cent stamp.

The air-mail episode marks the first setback the Administration has had. It just goes to prove the truth of the old saying that nothing will get a man into trouble quicker than a lot of letters.

• • • •

Col. Lindbergh has been in conference at Washington, it having been decided that Lindy knew a little more about flying than Secretary Farley.

• • • •

The outcome of the conference is unknown, and reports that Lindy proposed that the problem be solved by having Big Jim fly the mails on a single-motored floor plank are denied.

GONE BUT NOT FORGOTTEN.

There are Congressmen who favor a bill limiting the hours of work to 30 a week. That's about the time an old-fashioned, conscientious employe used to put in on a good, busy Saturday.

MYSTERY.

What's become of the fellow who was so interested in his job he used to come in and work nights now and then?

The Success Story of the future may see the the hero telling of his early hardships, with only five days a week off for golf, and boasting of how he was so determined to get ahead that he thought nothing of getting to work at noon and staying until after 3 p. m.

President Roosevelt is going fishing in Florida waters on the Astor yacht. His plan for a broader and more bountiful life does not include Spanish mackerel.

D. C. Old-Age Pension Law Hearings Set

Senate Unit Expected to Receive Testimony Next Week.

Hearings on an old-age pension law for the District probably will be begun next week by a sub-committee of the Senate District Committee, Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, said yesterday.

Appointment of Senator Reynolds to head the sub-committee was announced yesterday by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, committee chairman. Other members of the sub-committee will be named today or at a meeting of the committee called for 2 p. m. tomorrow, Senator King said.

Two bills are pending in the Senate, one introduced by Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, and the other by Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York. Senator Capper said he believed the differences between the measures can be ironed out easily. Some members of the committee, however, are opposed to enactment of an old-age pension law at this time, pointing out the unsettled relief conditions.

Several other measures are to be considered at the committee meeting tomorrow. Among these bills providing for liability assurance for operators of taxicabs and other public vehicles; changing procedure governing foreclosure of mortgages; broadening the powers of the District Commissioners. Advocates of the bill providing for a municipal airport at Gravelly Point will seek action on that measure also.

U. S. Is Warned Of Tire War

Price Fight Menace to Industry, Is Charge of Officials.

Akron, Ohio, March 13 (AP).—Penfield Seiberling, sales manager of the Seiberling Rubber Co., said in a statement today that the tire industry is "locked in a price war to destruction, and only prompt Government intervention can prevent complete wreckage of the business."

Seiberling claims that "8 to 10 per cent discounts from standard price lists" are being offered in New York. This would average between 45 and 50 per cent below list prices.

Seiberling attributed the latest difficulties to "Sears, Roebuck & Co., which insists on a 25 per cent lower price margin than the rest of the industry, and Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.'s determination to meet the mail order prices."

"Every day that the situation continues, it is costing the tire industry millions of dollars," he said.

Other Akron manufacturers admitted today the "situation is desperate," but refused to be quoted.

$10,000 Bond Set In Shooting Case

Wounded Man at Hospital in Critical Condition.

While his alleged victim with bullet wounds in the arm and abdomen, remained in critical condition at Sibley Hospital, Gordon Barbee, 24, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, was arraigned in Police Court yesterday and held under $10,000 bond for a preliminary hearing March 27.

Barbee is charged with shooting William H. Platt, 24, during an argument in an apartment house in the 100 block of New York avenue northwest, Sunday night. Barbee is said to have told detectives he went to Platt's apartment in search of a "girl friend." He was refused admittance and a struggle ensued, he said.

Cooper Bank Indictments Have Loophole

Grand Jury May Reopen Commercial National Investigation.

Because of the discovery that an indictment charging Col. Wade H. Cooper, president, and Bates Warren, general counsel, of the closed Commercial National Bank, contained possible "loopholes," the District grand jury this week will be requested to reopen its investigation of the affairs of the bank.

The indictment now standing in District Supreme Court fails to charge that either Col. Cooper or Warren had "knowledge" of the so-called irregularities charged against them. It was deemed advisable to renew the investigation with a view to establishing the possibility of inserting the element of "knowledge."

Col. Cooper and Warren are charged with misapplying some $90,000 of the institution's money and conspiring to misapply still other funds.

Their motion to quash the indictment was overruled by Justice Peyton Gordon, and he now has under advisement a motion to suppress the indictment because of its vagueness.

Both Col. Cooper and Warren maintain they are innocent of any wrongdoing.

New Law Rules Duck Blinds In 4 Counties

Riparian Owners' Rights Defined in Virginia Legislation.

Richmond, March 13 (AP).—A bill defining the right of riparian owners in Westmoreland, Richmond, Lancaster and Northumberland Counties in the selection of duck blind positions, and regulating the blinds' distance from shore and property lines, was approved by the recent General Assembly.

The measure, introduced by Senator Norris, of Lively, provides special licenses for blinds and prescribes drastic penalties for violations.

Owners of riparian rights are given first consideration in the choice of a duck blind position in front of their property, provided they mark the location of the proposed blind with a stake bearing the license number, not later than October 10. The blinds must be erected not later than November 10. Blinds licensed after November 10 must be erected not later than 20 days after.

In all waters with the exception of the Potomac, the Rappahannock and the Chesapeake Bay Shore between Smith Point and Windmill Point, it shall be unlawful to erect a blind more than 300 yards from the shore. In the Potomac and Rappahannock the distance shall not exceed 500 yards, and on the bay shore between Smith Point and Windmill Point, 1,000 yards.

In no case shall a blind be placed in water more than 8 feet deep. Distance between blinds must be at least 500 yards.

Licenses will be issued to bona fide residents or nonresidents with property assesed at $500 bordering on any of the rivers of the counties mentioned, upon the payment of a fee of $5. No person or association can have more than two blinds.

Drive Led by Senator J. W. Rust Will Save Virginians $80,000

Fairfax Economy Zealot Also Credited With Other Measures.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, March 13.—Virginia will save some $80,000 in two years under a successful drive by Senator John W. Rust, Fairfax, against pay increases, a survey of Legislative accomplishments disclosed today.

The Fairfax Senator's reputation as a champion of economy in government was borne out when he led a single-handed fight in the Assembly against salary raises for about two dozen State officials and employes. He bitterly opposed every increase suggested.

Mr. Rust contended depression-depleted State finances were in no condition to stand unwarranted drains. He argued there could be no justification for added compensation in the higher salary grades when thousands of deserving Virginians had no jobs of any sort.

After the Senate failed to heed his protest and voted the raises, Mr. Rust used his influence with the joint conference committee from the two Houses on the budget bill and had all increases stricken out, except a $1,000 boost for T. McCall Frazier, motor vehicles director.

Among officials who would have received substantial increases, except for the intervention of the Fairfax Senator, were the State Treasurer, the Secretary of the Commonwealth, the State Librarian, the State Tax Commissioners and the Director of Legislative Drafting.

Mr. Rust also was credited with eliminating from a bill to prohibit borrowing from their corporations by insurance company executives a provision which would have permitted loans of $25,000 when the officers posted collateral. He argued similar loans to bank officials caused many failures.

"It is poor policy," Mr. Rust insisted, "to let anyone borrow from himself."

A bill to permit insurance companies to charge compound interest on delinquent premiums was killed on the demand of Rust. He charged the measure would discriminate against the public.

The Fairfax Senator also put through the Legislature the first bill making it a crime to trespass on the property of another after a warning.

Harshman commended Paden. Policemen Desmond and Keiser testified Ricketts told them he was attempting to enter the club when someone shot him.

Convicted of Complicity in Robbery Attempt, Given 4 Years.

Kelly is the third person convicted in the holdup. Two others, Herbert Johnson and Laverne Bass, were sentenced to ten and eight years, respectively.

Kelly was only given four years. The prosecution admitted Kelly did not take part in the holdup attempt, but claimed he was the "brains" in the plot.

Jacobson opened fire on the highwaymen, killing Bob Richardson. Bass and Johnson were captured in North Carolina.

Jailed Official's Bond Withheld

Richmond, March 13 (AP).—The comptroller's office today informed the Attorney General's office that the bond for H. Tewart Jones, convicted former clerk of the Supreme Court of Appeals, had not been paid.

Jones pleaded guilty to an indictment charging discrepancies in the records of his office, and was sentenced to six years in the penitentiary. An audit showed discrepancies of more than $80,000.

As the bonds were written separately for different years on Mr. Jones' State service, it was said at the time his defalcations were discovered that the bonding company might resist payment for some of the years on the ground that until recently the State had been negligent in making audits.

2 Trucks Collide, 1 Crashes Store

Hagerstown, Md., March 13 (Spl.). Two trucks collided and one struck a store building today at Huyetts Cross Roads on the National Highway, scene of numerous collisions. Both drivers and the occupants of the building, which includes a store operated by County Commissioner Dallas Ward, escaped.

Social Affairs Are Resumed By Diplomats

Official Mourning Period Closes Except for Belgian Embassy.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

For all save the Belgian Embassy, whose observance of mourning for the late King of the Belgians will last three months, the mourning period is over, and many dinner parties postponed because of it will take place this week.

The Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Cardenas entertained last evening at a large dinner in honor of the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. de Lima e Silva, when there were 36 guests.

The rooms of the Spanish Embassy were decorated with spring flowers and large vases of lilies, and the patio, which has been turned into veritable garden under the personal supervision of Senora de Cardenas, was a gathering place for many groups after dinner. Many of the guests remained late for bridge.

French Envoy Entertains.

Senora de Cardenas' treatment of flowers is more than a knack. She studied flower arrangement under Asuma San, foremost exponent of artistic floral decorating in Japan, while she was in Japan, where her husband served as Spanish Ambassador before coming to Washington. Senora de Cardenas believes that nothing adds so much to the beauty of a room as the correct arrangement of flowers, and nothing so mars the appearance as an overlavish display.

Another party yesterday was an informal luncheon given by the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, when Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, of Chicago, were among the guests. Before luncheon Mrs. Dewey was decorated by the Ambassador with the French Legion or Honor, in recognition of her work among the French colony in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey are spending several days at the Mayflower before going to New York for a brief visit, after which they will return to Chicago.

Monastery Art Treasure.

In recent years, since Mr. Dewey has held no official position, he and Mrs. Dewey have been spending much time abroad. Mr. Dewey was formerly Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and later financial adviser to Poland, and since his retirement has spent much time in France, where he and Mrs. Dewey have purchased an old monastery which is being remodeled and redecorated. They have preserved the ecclesiastical atmosphere and the name, L'Abbaye Ste. Marie.

Recent excavations made in terracing the gardens have uncovered ancient relics which members of the Beaux Arts Commission of Paris have identified as objects of art from as early as the fourteenth century. Mr. and Mrs. Dewey are using many of them to decorate their home.

San Antonio, Tex., March 13. Mrs. Cora Carleton Glassford, of this city, has announced the approaching marriage of her daughter, Cora Elizabeth, to Lieut. Lee Wood Parke, U. S. N. The ceremony will take place March 17 in California.

Miss Glassford has been visiting at the Los Angeles home of her brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Combs, both of whom will be members of the wedding party. Groomsmen will include Lieut. Parke's fellow-officers from the destroyer Yarnell.

Miss Glassford's bridal costume will include a lace veil, worn in England at the marriage of her great grandmother.

After a brief honeymoon the newlyweds will return to Los Angeles. Lieut. Parke, in April, will join his ship at San Pedro to sail for the Atlantic Coast, while his bride will return here for a short visit. The couple will be at home after June 1 in Washington, where Lieut. Parke will be stationed.

Violin Concert By Haitowitsch Slated Tonight

Prince Obolensky Sings; Minister of Greece Among Patrons.

The Minister of Greece and Mme. Simopoulos are among the patrons and patronesses lately announced for the concert to be given this evening at the Mayflower by Abram Haitowitsch, Russian violinist, and Prince Alexis Obolensky, bass-cantante.

Additions to the committee include Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Thomas P. Gore, Mrs. Lewis W. Douglas, Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Clarence Phelps Dodge, Mrs. George H. Judd, Mrs. John B. Hyde, Miss Bessie J. Kibbey, Mrs. Barron P. DuBois and Mr. Robert Jackson.

Haitowitsch does not wish to be known as a "blind violinist." While it is true that he is sightless, it in no manner interferes with his playing. He studies the works of great masters in the same manner as any other artist. Those who have heard him play realize that the violin is safe in his hands. They know that the strings respond to his sensitive touch and that he draws from his bow a full and sweet tone.

Friends of Old Greet Japan's Envoy at Tea

Acquaintances First Met in Orient Welcome Saitos Here.

Washington long has had the reputation of being the place where old friends meet again and again.

Yesterday afternoon at a tea given in honor of the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito by the Rev. and Mrs. J. Armistead Welbourn, of Leesburg, Va., and Miss Sheldon Jackson and Miss Lesley Jackson in the latter's apartment in the Conrad, many residents of Washington had the opportunity of renewing old acquaintances.

The Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito and the Rev. and Mrs. Welbourn are friends of many meetings. They first met more than ten years ago, when the ambassador was at the start of his diplomatic career, and the Rev. Mr. Welbourn was an Episcopal missionary in Japan. Again their paths crossed in Seattle in 1921, when Mr. Saito was Japanese Consul there. Several years later the Rev. Mr. Welbourn was in New York when Mr. Saito was the Japanese Consul General there.

The Ambassador and Mme. Saito and the Misses Jackson first became friends when the Saitos were last in Washington. The guests at the tea yesterday included all of the members of the staff of the Japanese Embassy and their wives and about 75 members of the Army, Navy and civilian society of Washington who, in their travels had visited the Orient. The drawing rooms were artistically decorated with pink snapdragons and yellow jonquils. Those who assisted at the tea table were Mrs. Willard Warner, Miss Edith Goode, Miss McKhight and Miss Poole.

Dear Madam:
I wish you all would get one of these extension telephones for the kitchen.
You don't like me coming in the parlor to telephone the grocer when there's company, and I don't either. If I had a telephone right there, it would'nt happen.
And that burned steak we had the other night happened 'cause I had to leave the kitchen to answer the telephone; and time I got back it was too late. They don't cost much, and I sure wish I had one right there beside like.

Walter Plunkett Points to New Spring Trends

Hollywood Designer Says Youth Is Fashion Theme Song.

Hollywood, March 13 (U.P.).—The theme-song of spring fashions is youth, according to Walter Plunkett, Hollywood designer, who believes that thin, fat, tall, short, dark or fair women can be smart, chic and lovely this season if they will choose wisely from the wealth of modish fashions offered for their approval.

He points out that there are tunics that make the wearer tall, younger and more alluring. There are regal necklines high at the back with frilly fullness at the front of the throat that flatter young and old alike.

There is the new evening silhouette for the woman with the lovely figure—a dramatic version of the princess line with spiral skirt flounces that are really lovely. There are misty tulles for evening wear that are developed over molded satin slips that reveal the lines of the form—all of which form interesting lines for youth, he says.

Women should remember that the secret of ultra-smartness is to look at ease in clothes. When a woman does this, she looks charming, but, if she wears something that makes her feel uncomfortable—she shows it, plainly.

Cottons and linens in every conceivable shade will be popular for summer, both in street and evening frocks.

Coats are in with a vengeance. Either full length or three-quarter and your choice should be based on your figure.

Here's a beach tip. Light silk bathing suits with matching skirts promise to be popular. That's because the thin silk will dry quickly and the skirt may be slipped on to make a street ensemble.

Frances Dee gives her home facial formula this week. She says, "Steam your face for two minutes, then put pure honey into your skin. Remove with warm water, then apply the white of an egg. Allow this to dry, then wash off and you'll look and feel brand-new."

The taffeta evening jacket so smart earlier in the season is now being used as a bed jacket. Ginger Rogers has combined a wine-red one with a white satin nightgown.

Jean Parker appeared at a recent Hollywood premier carrying a beaded evening bag, shaped like a miniature muff.

Here's a suggestion for the tall statuesque blonde, given by Thelma Todd. She varies the use of clip earrings by wearing one in her hair and one in the ear on the same side, dressing her hair so that one ear is exposed.

Woman Speaks On Government

Rep. Kahn Says Women Need Knowledge of Political Science.

It is necessary for every woman to have some knowledge of the science of government.

Representative Florence P. Kahn, of California, made that statement yesterday afternoon in her broadcast on "Politics as a Career for Women." Mrs. Kahn's speech was part of the program sponsored by members of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs in the celebration of National Business Women's Week.

"Politics as a real career has never been given consideration in this country," said Mrs. Kahn, "either by men or women as it has, for example, in England. There politics is as definite a career as medicine, law or the army or navy.

"In this country, politics usually means office holding. A series of untoward events, a desire for power, seldom a desire to serve, is the motive that projects a man or woman into a political career, and it is frequently only after he or she has embarked upon the career that the education for it begins."

Mrs. Kahn then pointed out that the increasing perplexities of government and its closer relation with our economic life, have opened up a new field for women, in which they are peculiarly fitted to serve.

"But the successful person in politics is the one with a real flair for it, for, just as in every other profession, not everyone will succeed. The best groundwork is a keen and intelligent working interest in community affairs, and a gradual enlargement of the sphere of activity.

"But there is a political career open to every woman," Mrs. Kahn concluded. "It lies in correcting causes that lead to discontent, in helping to maintain law and order, and helping to regulate conditions that at least give every one a chance."

Mrs. Miller to Richmond To Study Relief Work

Mrs. Hugh Miller, prominent welfare worker and regional adviser for the Emergency Relief Council in Missouri, who has been in Washington for the last few days, left last night for Richmond, Va. In Richmond Mrs. Miller will study the work being done by the Citizens Service Exchange, which provides an opportunity for every person helped by the emergency relief to give some service in return for the money given him.

Mrs. Miller is also intensely interested in the work being done by the Fellowship of the Design for Universal Life, which Miss Annie C. Bill founded several years ago. Miss Bill's book, "Government in the New Era," has won wide recognition among persons seeking to bring about a better social and economic order.

Squash Team's Shorts Amaze English Gallery

Despite Discussed Outfits They Get Through to Quarter Finals.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

Echoes are coming back across the Atlantic, of the sally into England made by the first American women's squash racquets team to go on tour abroad.

Anne Page, of Philadelphia, was runner-up in the American National championship. Mrs. G. Bryans Wolfe, co-donor with Susan Noel, English champion, of the Wolfe-Noel Cup, which the team went to England with the hope of recapturing for America, sends the English comments.

Four of the first five club competitions were won by the Americans, and in the English championship Miss Page and two other members of the team came through to the quarter finals.

"On the whole I don't consider our performance at all bad," Miss Page says. "As the English courts are 3 feet wider, the ball more lively and the scoring different, it takes some time for us to adapt to English conditions of play. Stamina is the biggest thing in the English game."

Mrs. Wolfe remarks of Miss Marguerite Anderson, another ranking member of the American team—"Miss Anderson and her shorts became almost the controversy of the day. In fact, the charming appearance of the American team galvanized one paper into pronouncing Miss Fenwick as the best dressed skirted player, and advised Miss Noel to return to skirts, seeing that there was no hope for a mere English pair of shorts."

More seriously, Mrs. Wolfe says of the differences in the game in the two countries: "Personally, I feel that the whole game hinges on the large court. I should vote for our courts and balls, and the American rules and scoring."

Its Garbo's Shoes And Not Her Feet

Shoemaker to Royalty Discusses Ankles.

A man who really understands feet, Andrew Perugia, shoemaker to the Queen of the Belgians and other members of European nobility, is convinced that all that Garbo needs is the right shoe.

"It is a base canard to say her feet are big," exclaimed Perugia. "It is the shoes that are wrong. Never do they fit. The good shoemaker, he could make Mlle. Garbo's feet look as heavenly as her face. I think because she is tall and must not be bigger than the hero always she wears the flat-heeled shoe. And not the beautiful flat-heel one, but the ugly, ill-fitting one."

To Perugia, feet and ankles are revealing of character.

"You can tell the breeding of a woman by the proportion of her feet," he says. "And when I see the face I can divine the foot."

The artistic shoemaker has only disdain for women who are "snobs" about their feet, who ask for sizes smaller than they need. He also has no patience for beauty of face without beauty of ankle.

Issue Honoring All Mothers To Come Out Around May 1

Huge Initial Sale Expected; Postmaster General Farley Predicts Popularity for Stamps; They Will Be Lavendar and 3 Cent.

A world that has been invaded by women but three times in 87 years will let down its barriers once more to feminine ingress when the new Mother's Day stamp is issued about May 1.

Since the first Government postage stamp was issued in 1847, the faces of scores of heroes—Presidents, warriors, statesmen—have paraded across the wrappings of Government mail. But only three women, Queen Isabella of Spain, Pocahontas and Martha Washington, have ever appeared in the National stamp gallery. Now, Whistler's famous painting of his mother is to be used on a stamp in commemoration of all the Nation's mothers.

The new stamp will be issued in time to appear on the large annual volume of Mothers' Day mail. Being of a 3-cent denomination, it will have widespread circulation.

It'll Be Popular.

Postmaster General Farley has predicted that it will be the most popular stamp ever issued and arrangements are being made now by City Postmaster William M. Mooney and Robert E. Fellers, superintendent, division of stamps, to handle the huge initial sale expected in Washington.

The stamp, which will be of a lavender color, will be one of the most artistic ever issued by the Postoffice Department. Its size will be that of current special delivery values.

Stamps that have previously been issued to honor women have been of less popular denomination than this one. Isabella of Spain, the first stamp lady, made a very limited appearance, as her stamp was of $1 denomination. It was a beautiful rose-salmon stamp, issued in 1893 as part of the Columbian series commemorating the discovery of America by Columbus. The series began with a 1-cent stamp showing Columbus sighting land. A 2-cent stamp showed his landing, a 3-cent one his flagship, a 4-cent one his fleet. When the series got up to $1, Isabella was shown pledging her jewels to make possible the voyage of Columbus.

Pocahontas Was Blue.

Pocahontas was the next woman to be pictured on a stamp. Hers was a 5 cent blue one, a part of a series issued in 1907 in connection with the Jamestown exposition. The series started with Capt. John Smith on the 1 cent issue.

Martha Washington, the first First Lady of the country, achieved stamp honors in the 1922-23 series. This was a regular issue. All other women's pitcures have appeared on commemorative issues. The stamp, brown in color, carried a reproduction of the Gilbert Stuart painting of Martha Washington. It was of 4 cent denomination. The 1 cent stamp in the series had carried the picture of Franklin, the 2 cent one, George Washington; the 3 cent one, Lincoln, and the 5 cent one, Theodore Roosevelt.

Even in a day when women have reached their zenith of illustrative value to newspapers and magazines, their breaking into the stamp gallery is no small achievement. In fact stamp recognition is an honor that is eagerly sought for before it is granted. Hundreds of requests for stamps honoring persons or occasions are on file in the Postoffice Department.

President Suggests Motif.

To the American War Mothers is credited the recognition that is to be given all mothers this May through the Mother's Day stamp. The National executive committee of the organization evolved the idea and worked tirelessly to bring it to the attention of President Roosevelt and other Government heads. The President showed much interest in the plan and was responsible for the suggestion that Whistler's painting of his mother should be the motif of the stamp.

Mrs. H. H. McCluer, chairman of the commemorative stamp committee of the War Mothers, and Mrs. Howard C. Boone, National chairman of ways and means, both of Kansas City, have been in Washington working in behalf of the Mother's Day stamp issuance. Mrs. W. E. Ochiltree, National president of the organization, has been aiding them.

Cool and Light Summer Velvet Will Be Worn

Comes Smooth Surfaced, in Striped Patterns and Ridges.

Every designer and stylist went about merrily last fall chanting, "This is a velvet season." Their paen might well have been "This is a velvet year," for velvet is the biggest news in the summer fabric world.

The velvet for summer is a far cry from the warm, thick fabric that has long been a favorite among winter materials. The new version is cool, lightweight and dainty, and yet retains the luxurious, furry surface of the more familiar kind.

Many of these smart new velvets are in gay striped patterns. The most fashionable ones have very narrow stripes, woven in ridges to catch the light. One called vel piquante consists of gray, oyster white, orange and sage green stripes, separated by narrow lines of black. The wild sounding combination is really quite conservative, so small are the stripes.

Vel piquante is also made in another color scheme, eggshell and nigger brown. The dark shade has no nap, while the eggshell stripes stand up in tiny ridges.

A smooth-surfaced summer velvet is known as la derniere heure. It has a mahogany brown ground with narrow deep cream stripes at quarter-inch intervals. Accompanying each narrow stripe is a mere line of the deep cream shade.

These attractive and unusual new summer materials are excellent for coats, separate jackets, suits and dresses. Vel piquant, with its rough little ridges, is ideal for casual capes or jackets to be worn over sports or afternoon frocks. La derniere heure is at its best in dress suits or semiformal coats.

Actress Poston Studies Lines Over Ironing Board.

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

This is the way Aurora Poston finds time for play-acting—she told me so herself: She props up the lines for the role she is studying over the kitchen sink or the ironing board. So if you see Leading Lady Aurora—what a name for a pretty blond actress!—in "The Second Mrs. Fraser," to be done by the Columbia Players in April, you'll know that she has learned her part under difficulties.

Home-making, managing a real estate office, and working in a flower garden at her home in Woodside Park, along with her play acting make life exceedingly full for Aurora Poston. Her son, Edward, a student at the University of Maryland, has his mother's bent for drama. He played the cub reporter in the recent newspaper sketch by Columbia Players.

Handsome, easy-going "Singin' Sam" refused to use a continuity prepared for him for his interview-broadcast the other night. He tore up the typewritten remarks and gave his interviewer a ticklish few moments of extemporaneous filling in. "Singin' Sam" is a bachelor, lives at Richmond, Ind., when he can take time to reside anywhere. His home is a spacious one which formerly was used as a stopping place for transients and was fondly known to men travelers as "Hotel de Bum." Lawn mowers and coffee have played nearly as important parts in "Singin' Sam's" career as shaving cream.

Another notable gentleman who hails from Richmond, Ind., is Strickland Gilliland. Friends at Richmond Hotel tell this one on Mr. Gilliland: On the list where guests at the hotel registered the hour when they wished to be called in the morning. "Call me 8." "Call me 9," &c.—Gilliland wrote: "Call me Strick."

An Army officer cherished a pair of pajamas he had bought in China. He wore the pajamas until the sleeves were frayed and there were cigarette burns in the jacket pocket. The officer employed a Chinese tailor to reproduce the garments—"exactly like the others to the last thread." When the literal Chinese sent his finished product to the Army man the new pajamas had a cigarette hole burned in the pocket and had the new material cleverly frayed to resemble the original pair.

Chatting in a friendly manner after a Senate committee hearing were the daughter of an extremely liberal former Governor of a Western State and the correspondent for one of the more reactionary financial organs. Without disclosing her identity, the former Governor's daughter asked the correspondent if he knew her father.

"Yes, I know that louse!" was the answer.

Their Feet May Walk.

By Katherine Smith.

When youth is but a dream as breathless
As the gold of coming dawn,
Age may wear a cloak, and restless
Pace the ways once trod upon
By nimbler feet. Yet youth, in seeking
Havens in a storm may meet
Maturity whose wisdom, speaking
Guides the hesitating feet.
Though youth may be a dream as breathless
As the gold of rising sun,
Age may be a youth as deathless,
And their feet may walk as one.

G. O. P. Woman Says Renovate Whole Party

Mrs. Jacob Bauer Deplores Conservatism Carried to Extremes.

Political leaders should be good citizens first, and good politicians second.

Mrs. Jacob Bauer, Republican National Committeewoman from Illinois, and prominent leader in the Republican party, made that statement yesterday at the Mayflower, where she is staying in Washington.

"The times are too critical, and the future too uncertain for people to be wasting their time in petty political arguments," Mrs. Bauer asserted. "We must all work together for the greater good of humanity. We can not cling to outgrown traditions; we can not work for the interests of a small group when the fate of our Nation is at stake."

Complete reorganization of the Republican party is inevitable, according to Mrs. Bauer.

"Many Republicans helped put President Roosevelt in office," she said. "And the fact that they voted for a leader of the opposite party showed that they were dissatisfied with their own.

"The Republican party must be reorganized from the bottom up. Our party is the conservative party, and has played a great part in the development of our Nation. But when conservatism is carried to the extreme it ceases to accomplish good. We have not kept abreast of the times. We have failed to recognize that this is the beginning of a new era, and that the old ideals and methods will no longer suffice.

Mrs. Bauer spoke of women in politics, and stated her belief that in the future, women will have much greater political influence than in the past.

"There are many reasons for this," she said. "For one thing, women are going into politics more seriously. The present economic crisis has roused greater interest in politics than ever before. Then, too, women need the jobs, they are going into politics for profits as well as for patriotism, just as the men do."

"We all know that women have always been on the outside when great political questions were discussed. I do not think they will be in the future. The greatest reason for this is that the men now need women in politics. As long as they were sailing along beautifully by themselves they did not pay much attention to the women, but they have found that there were many problems they could not solve alone, and they invited the women to come in and help solve them."

"But the biggest reason that women have a great future in public life and in politics is that President Roosevelt has set the precedent. He has seen fit to give women much more important offices than Republican leaders ever did. And in the future, Democrats and Republicans alike must give women their rightful place in guiding the affairs of our Nation."

Island Women's Status Bettered

Mrs. Melencio, a Filipino, Lectures Concerning Country Women.

Women, in the future, will be one of the most decisive factors in Filipino history and life.

Addressing the women's alliance of All Soul's Unitarian Church yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Carmen Aguinaldo Melencio, whose husband is technical adviser to the Filipino delegation, made this statement. Mrs. Melencio's subject was, "The Status of Women in the Philippines."

"Only last November the franchise was extended to women in the Philippine Islands," Mrs. Melencio said. "They could have had it long before, but had not felt that they were ready for it.

"But last year, under the leadership of members of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, women asked for the vote and received it. There was no organized campaign and women received the vote almost without asking for it. This was due to the fact that every governor of the island since the time of Gov. Gen. Wood had recommended that the franchise be extended to women. And we do feel that women will be more influential in the life of the islands, now that they are voting."

Mrs. Melencio then traced the history of the Philippines before and after they were conquered by Spain and payed tribute to the United States for the wonderful progress since the American occupation of the islands.

"We had very good schools and universities under the Spanish regime, but these did not reach the majority of the people as the public schools do. Today 70 per cent of the inhabitants of the islands can read and write. Many of them attend the universities and some go to other countries to study."

Knowledge of the English language is one of the greatest gifts of the United States to the Filipinos, according to Mrs. Melencio.

"Practically everyone there speaks English now," she said. "The talkies even keep them up on the latest slang, and it is not unusual to hear such phrases as 'Oh, yeah!' and 'You're telling me' in the streets of Manila."

Mrs. Melencio emphasized the fact that the people in the islands are very friendly to the United States, and are grateful for the progress they have made under its leadership.

"And, of course, the status of women has especially improved," she said. "No longer are they confined to the home: all professions and businesses are open to them. There is hardly any field that they have not entered. And, with the minor exception, that they are not permitted to go to social affairs unchaperoned, their lives are very much like the lives of American girls."

Flower Prints And Perfumes Are Displayed

Scents Shown With the Designs They've Inspired.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

And so when the perfumes wouldn't go to the prints, the prints came to the perfumes . . .

This grand get-together is being celebrated in a local shop where several show cases have been dedicated to a lavish splurge of lyric-like silk prints and their namesake perfumes.

The alluring gardenia fragrance is symbolized in a silky fabric with large white gardenias against a colored background. The leaves and stems are interwoven to form a fantastic, flowery pattern.

A bouquet scent is vividly portrayed in alluringly tinted flowers scattered against either blue, cerise, green or mauve. Here is truly a spring print worthy of the short woman's full attention. It is so daintily carried out that she need not fear being overwhelmed by the design.

A woodsy print typifies a forest perfume. It, too, comes in a variety of colors, though preeminently in a characteristic green.

A fantasy of orange blossoms in a bright print brings to the eye the meaning in the fresh lemon verbena and orange blossom perfume for which it was designed.

The light fragrance of valley lilies is nicely carried out in a silk fabric splashed with small flowers against a background of shimmery greens and blues—the colors of water in the sunshine.

These silks will play a large part in plans for a spring wardrobe. They are adapted to dresses, negligees, bags, pajamas and scarfs.

For Brushing Up.

It's a case of mental leapfrog to jump from the idea of silk prints to complexion brushes, but it's only a short walk down the street from the store which carries the one to the store which carries the other.

These brushes were designed for the express purpose of blending make-up, and for giving it an enviable naturalness. They are made of soft camel's hair, so securely fastened to a small wooden frame that the manufacturer guarantees them for two years.

Clear the Air.

Some new deodorizing tablets are said to be exceedingly efficient in counteracting any unpleasant odor. They are designed to be hung anywhere around the home, clubs, or public buildings, wherever there is need to purify the air. Three scents are available—rose, cedar-pine and violet. The price of a tablet—10 cents.

Fun While You Splash.

This department votes three cheers for a certain beauty expert who is proving herself to be no less a beauty artist than an ingenious designer. Her latest creation is an oversized Easter egg, deliciously pink looking, and smelling somewhat of geraniums. It's an Easter egg, all right, but it's more—it's a soap egg too!

It's usually the children who like to splash around in the tub with queer animal soapies, but here's one package that will make an adult want to do a little splashing around too.

The Easter soap-egg is bought already packed in a box made into a nest with fine stripes of green oiled paper.

A local shop is offering us the unique opportunity of spending a dollar and receiving a $2 value. (We scooped Mr. Ripley on this.) For, believe it or not, with every purchase of a dollar or more, of certain beauty preparations, be it powder, perfume, rouge, or what-not, they present us with a prize package containing powder, skin tonic and freshener, special cleansing cream and absorbent cotton.

Dear Miss Davis: I have very unruly eyebrows and have tried several times to pluck them myself but without success. I never can arch them alike, or a bit even. As I can not afford to pay beauty salon prices I don't know what to do. ANNE.

Dear Anne: Why not make a visit to a salon and have a girl shape your brows for you. Once she has done this you can keep them identical and even by plucking them every week yourself. Be sure and tell the operator that you do not want artificial looking brows as they're simply "not worn." We are, thank goodness, returning to simplicity and naturalness.

Easter Winds Swirl Millinery All Sorts of New Directions

Hats Blow Toward the Back and Side in Fashion's Winds.

New York, March 14.—Those spring winds which have struck fashion seem to have developed into regular "twisters" . . . going in several directions at once. For where Easter coats and dresses are blown diretly forward or just as directly back in the wind-swept silhouette, Easter hats are more apt to be struck from an angle, sweeping from the front left to the right back.

Some hats, to be sure, notably those of "baby bonnet" persuasion, do meet a head-on wind and sweep straight back from the forehead. But the newer idea is to modify this hard-to-wear-if-you're-not-still-young line and let the backward movement of the hat start from the side.

Flower Trimming.

One of these swept-off-the-forehead types is shown in the sketch at the top. The rather deep brim is turned directly back in the manner of the fisherman or sou'wester hat and all the decorative detail is concerntrated in the back, in the pleated brim and flower band.

The other two hats sketched show the left-to-right movement of the fashion wind. The beret at the bottom (yes, berets are still fashionably with us) instead of being draped just to the side is draped farther back, giving a definitely to-the-back movement.

The other hat with brim rolled on the side accents its back movement by a rakishly placed feather which is a regular weather vane of the way the fashion breeze is blowing.

Reveals Profile.

The "profile" hat is another spirited type, flattering to women of all ages. The tiny brim is rolled on the left side to reveal the entire profile. Then down it dips over the right eye, often widening out at the front to give an extended visor effect.

There's no general rule to be given for choosing a hat to wear with a wind-blown coat. But it's a good idea to have a feeling of motion in it. And, of course, to have it becoming.

Hats of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

By Susan Mills.

It's a great relief to every one that the winter season has broken up. The air is warmer and there is that fresh feeling that accompanies the first robin and anticipates the crocus.

Asparagus is back! On the face of it, such a statement is a sure sign of spring. For, when the spring vegetables come in, it is known that summer is not far behind.

So, when you rush out to buy the first green tender-tipped bunches, plan to prepare them in new ways. You owe it to your family and to the asparagus as well. Let your next meal be a ceremonial function, with the asparagus at the front row of the chorus. The performance is guaranteed to be a success.

Did you ever try asparagus with mushrooms? Here's how. The recipe is from the Congressional Cook Book, and was submitted by Mrs. Albert W. Bissell, daughter of the former Secretary of the Interior.

Asparagus With Mushrooms.

1 Bunch fresh asparagus, boiled.
¼ Pound mushrooms.
4 Tablespoons butter.
4 Tablespoons flour.
1 Teaspoon salt.
¼ Teaspoon pepper.
2 Cups milk.
6 Slices toast.

Heat asparagus in double boiler; melt the butter in a pan, and add the flour, seasonings, then milk. Cook until thick and smooth, add mushrooms, skinned and cut up, cook until mushrooms are done. Place asparagus on toast and pour the sauce over.

Good, isn't it? Or you might try this method of preparing this vegetable. Boil it until tender, drain, then dip each piece in a well-beaten egg, roll in bread crumbs, and fry in butter.

The cookbook the Congressional ladies have put out is full of delightful methods of preparing asparagus. Because they are so appetizing even to read (and that is the test of a good recipe), I'm going to give you another one.

Asparagus With Cheese.

Put fresh or canned asparagus in layers in a buttered baking dish with rich white sauce and grated cheese between, brown slightly. Put a tablespoon chopped onion with two tablespoons butter, and pour over top of dish, sprinkle with grated cheese and brown in oven.

These two recipes are rather fancy, but if the asparagus is fresh and delicious nothing is needed to make it appetizing but the correct cooking and the addition of a little butter, salt and pepper. Don't boil asparagus too long, for if you do, the tops will drop off, and the flavor will not be as delicate.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If March 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 6:25 to 7:25 p. m.

If March 14 is your birthday, you should avoid indulging in inactivity. You will find life far more interesting if you will develop a hobby of some kind, which will keep your mind alert and your eyes wide open for the opportunities you will have to take advantage of. The collection of books, china, autographs, or stamps, can keep one busy an entire lifetime, and if you become enthusiastic, your interest will never wane. You have an unusually fertile brain, and if you will supply it with sufficient material, in the way of knowledge, which can only be picked up by study it is capable of producing some very original and constructive ideas.

The child born on March 14, as it grows up, should be taught that procastination is only the result of a lack of energy. A lazy person puts off doing things that one possessing plenty of vigor does without the slightest hesitancy. A child will readily learn not to put off doing a thing, if impressed with the fact that it eventually has to be done and will require just twice the effort if delayed.

The woman born on March 14 has a passion for beautiful clothes and surroundings. Being of an artistic nature, she has a gift to be able to gracefully arrange the simplest of things. She has excellent taste, and usually proves it by not indulging in any of the extremes that changing styles so frequently tempt the gullible feminine public to flaunt, offending the eyes of the more conservative members of their sex. The wise woman, whose natal day this is, realizes nature can not be radically improved on, so avoids an excessive use of cosmetics and perfumes.

The man born on March 14 loves money not for money's sake, but solely for the comforts and pleasures it can provide and thus, by this trait, proves he is thoroughly human. Generous almost to a fault, he is the type that is very popular with both men and women. Men, whose birthday this is, may find it to their advantage to adopt as their motto: "A dollar saved is a dollar made." "A good spender" is in reality one who knows how to spend his money judiciously. A man to be successful must give serious thought to his financial standing.

People born on March 14 might find it advisable not to let their good natures be imposed on by their friends' wheedling and flattery. It is sometimes profitable to learn to say, NO.

Creative Arts Exhibition Held By Clubwomen

Metal Work, Wood Carving Included in Chevy Chase Display.

Time was when the woman with spare time on her hands could devote it only to embroidery or to the Browning circle. Then bridge helped solve her dilemma. Now the creative arts are offering her a much wider field.

What home-making women can achieve in their leisure in a creative way was demonstrated yesterday afternoon at the exhibit of the art section of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club, at the Chevy Chase Library. Included in the display were bowls, trays and jewelry made of silver and copper, examples of wood carving and block printing and of oil painting.

The women exhibiting the art metal work have been enrolled for the last year in a class with an instructor. Examples of silver and copper work were shown by Mrs. E. B. Adams, Mrs. Clarence E. Dawson, Mrs. Roy Palmer, Mrs. Frederic E. Parks and Mrs. Harry W. Price, leader of the silver and copper group.

Mrs. Willis J. Nolan, a native of Czechoslovakia, exhibited wood carving and block printing specimens; Mrs. C. W. Freitag, petit point and Mrs. John Lane, rugs. Paintings were exhibited by Mrs. Walter A. Miles, Mrs. Fred Keplinger, Mrs. Leifur Magnusson, Mrs. Jean H. Hawley and Mrs. Webster S. Ruckman.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Children's specialists report that about three-fourths of all the children other than babies brought to them by fond mothers are not really sick. They are poor eaters, finicky eaters, and such, and the parents are afraid they will become sick. The mother has tried her best, has used every guile and persuasion she knows of, has rewarded and punished, has cooked tempting dishes, and has given a variety of medicines. Acknowledging failure and plainly showing her agitation and fears, she consults a physician.

The first task of the doctor is to examine the child thoroughly in search of organic diseases, anemias, tonsillitis, rheumatisms, and evidence of fatigue. In most cases he finds nothing. Then comes the task of convincing the parent that the trouble is functional and the remedy is training.

Immediately the parent flares up. She resents the imputation that she has neglected her child. The physician undertakes to convince her that she is right. She has tried. Unfortunately, she has overtried. What the child needs is a good-sized dose of neglect. He sugar-coats this statement by calling it purposeful neglect. He undertakes to convince the parent that the use of rewards is bald, but employing punishment is worse.

The attitude to take is one of indifference. The child sees no great effort to make his food appealing. Its preparation is a matter of daily routine. Serving the food is even more a matter of indifference. The food is set before the child without comment. There is no persuasion, no salesmanship. The food is not talked up. If the child does not eat, the fact is not noticed.

At the end of a certain rather fixed time the tray is removed without comment except that the bib is removed and the child is told to go on with his play. If there be any particular invitation to eat it should be in the nature of "Come, let us eat," rather than an order or command or even individual invitation.

An even better plan is to put the child in company with other children of the same age. After they have played together long enough to have become acquainted they are invited to the table. They respond in the companionship of the play in which they were engaged just prior to the play. Within limitations the meal is merely a continuation of the play with its fellowship and enjoyment.

The poor-eating child, placed in a group of normal, playful children and then purposely neglected will have about the regular amount of appetite and will conform to the eating habits of his associates. After a few meals he will have adopted their foods and their ways of eating. When the habit is fixed the child is cured. But he may not be fixed enough in his new ways to withstand a renewal of the policy of coaxing, tempting, and punishing.

Beggars All

By Katharine Newlin Burt.

Hortense just looked at him, tightened her lips and followed, as did Cranston. Rafe took them straight across the hall into what his grandmother had called the south parlor. It was a room lined with portraits, a cool, dark room now lighted by a single central lamp on a leather-topped desk table.

"I want Maddalena," said Rafe.

Hortense crossed to a bell and pressed it three times quickly. They waited, Cranston and Hortense with their hostile and expectant eyes on Rafe. After a second summons Maddalena came in haste.

"Now, Courvoisier," demanded Hortense, "what do you want? I can't stay away from my guests. I have been told that Mr. Jay has forbidden my marriage to Randal Crewe. It seems, as usual, that I am to know nothing of the truth." Her eyes were wet with shame and frightened pride. Rafe saw her hands working together. He came over to her and slowly, tenderly, he lifted them to his lips.

"Hortense Kendall," he said softly, "will you do me the honor to become my wife?"

She lifted her clear, ice-blue eyes. Neither of them heard Cranston's exclamation or Maddalena's little gasp. Rafe stood and looked down into those eyes. The mist of his pain and of his passion clouded his own while he waited, holding her look. Then—and his heart turned over at the sight—that change that he had hoped for came; the eyes widened into their childlike depth and warmth. Her hands moved doubtfully in his. He bent his head to feel again, with what an ecstasy of thirst, the cool and thrilling pressure of her mouth on his own.

Free to Love.

"I'm free to love you now," he said. "You are free, too, Hortense, to let me love you. Cranston"—he turned around, his face alive and alight. "I think you have your prayer book in your pocket."

"I have sir. But I can't understand——"

"I want you as quickly as you can to marry Miss Kendall and myself."

There was an uneasy pause. The young clergyman looked from Rafe to Hortense and back again.

"I was brought out here to marry Miss Kendall to Mr. Crewe. This seems to me very irregular. Then there's the matter of the license."

"Maddalena, you will find Mr. Tobin in the dining room." She ran. "In our State these licenses are given by the Ordinary when one party to the contract has appeared with witnesses before him. Miss Kendall has already put her signature. The bridegroom's name-space is blank. I am going to fill it in immediately. I am of age. Miss Kendall is past the age of consent. The Ordinary is ready to accept my signature. As for Mr. Crewe—you have heard what happened. He will hardly be willing to marry this lady now, even if she were willing, which I now know she couldn't be. If God spares us through this night, I think Miss Kendall and I can make up to Crewe all the bitterness of this experience. Hortense, my darling, we can put it right. Ah, here is the Ordinary. What did I tell you, Mr. Tobin? You had the bridegroom's name quite wrong. It's Rafe Courvoisier. Maddalena and Mr. Cranston will be witnesses."

Cranston's eyes shone like a pickaninny's. "Miss Kendall, you are the person to decide. I am willing at your request, to perform this different ceremony."

With a dazed movement of her head which seemed to surrender the burden of Crewe and Chetteraw, Hortense came toward the clergyman and put her hand in Rafe's. Maddalena drew from her finger a golden ring. Rafe signed his name there on the table where he had so often played chess with his grandmother.

The Wedding Ceremony.

Solemnly then Cranston spoke: "I require and charge you both as ye will answer at the dreadful day of judgment when the secrets of all hearts shall be disclosed. * * *"

Cranston kissed Hortense upon the forehead.

"Mrs. Rafe Courvoisier," he said, "whatever may have been the recent adventures of your husband, you have a great tradition to live up to now in Chatteraw. God bless you. And may He forgive me," he added turning tremulously to Rafe, "if I have done wrong."

The bridegroom snapped his hard sailor's fingers. "I'm responsible, man. Don't worry. Here, Maddalena, you must take care of your child now. We've got a bad night ahead of us. Darling, I love you. I want you to stay here, to manage those people in there and keep them out of harm's way. Tell them we're getting rid of the hostage, Madrone. Once he's out of the way, the danger's over. Do you understand, my darling?" He kissed her again, his lashes wet, unlocked the door, and led Cranston back toward the living room. Hortense had fallen to her knees in front of Maddalena who put about her her strong peasant arms.

Rafe's heart sang, "This is my house, my island, and my wife!" He was made over in the likeness of his forefathers. He stepped back into that room, so evidently its master that the great uneasy humming there fell silent, reassured at sight of him. He had opened his mouth to speak to them when the whole tableau of confusion, suspense, dismay was shattered into fragments by a shot. There followed a sharp rattle of musketry that shook the windows, then silence.

Madrone Hears Counsel.

In the hall Rondo and Rafe took counsel. Madrone propped on his elbow straining to hear. Rondo, who had run in with two or three of the defenders, was in a great sweat, mopping his face, his neck, his chest.

"They shoot when they see a movement in the shrubbery. Those others fire back quick. Emilio, one other boy, too, are hurt. Ah, here is Toni. What now, Toni, what now?"

"They are asking for a talk, a what you call—parley."

"Good," said Rafe. "Let them have it. I have something that must be done while you are parleying. Draw it out as long as you can."

"Send Eugenio," said Madrone, hoarsely, "but do not let them get close. Keep your rods trained on them so that they can see. At top of the terrace—take 'Genio there—no farther. See? They wil lask for me to be surrendered."

TVA Promises Valley Cheaper Electric Goods

Cost of Electric Appliances to Be Cut 20 to 32%, Says Lilienthal.

Low-cost electrical appliances will become a reality soon in the Tennessee Valley, David E. Lilienthal, head of the Electric Home and Farm Authority, predicted yesterday.

Reductions of 20 to 32 per cent in the retail prices in the valley have been received from electric manufacturers, he said. The director termed as remote prospects that the authority would manufacture its own appliances.

Lilienthal said he had received numerous requests for expansion of the valley appliance subsidiary operations to other areas, including the West Coast. He added there would be no extension before August 1.

The official reported he knew of no legal deterrent to prevent a reasonable expansion of territory for sale of the low cost appliances.

Agreements just reached cover prices of electric ranges and water heaters. Lilienthal said prices of electric refrigerators asked by manufacturers remained too high. He expressed confidence, however, that sharp reductions will come.

Later, Secretary Ickes declared he had discussed with Lilienthal cooperation between the TVA and the PWA to permit disbursal of electric energy to certain Southern cities, including Knoxville, Tenn.

Meanwhile, the Federal Power Commission announced plans for a public hearing, April 16, on an application of Southern Industries & Utilities, Inc., for a license to construct a power project on the Tennessee River. The TVA will oppose it.

Superpsychic Bidding and Bad Defense.

The bidding and play of today's hand teach practically nothing except possibly what not to do. The various bids made by everyone but South transcend explanation and are absolutely impossible to justify. As for the subsequent defense, which enabled the Declarer to fulfill the contract, the West player does deserve some sympathy as his play was due not to a foolish decision but merely to an unfortunate guess.

1—A semipsychic. The hand is not good enough for a sound Opening bid and, in my opinion, is too strong for a psychic.
2—Another would-be brilliant psychic.
3—East should redouble. However, it is probable that the East player suspected his partner's bid as being not exactly sound.
4—The first normal bid of the auction.
5—North naturally must rescue, quite properly feeling that he has misled his partner by his previous Takeout Double.
6—South admittedly was quite bewildered at this point. Not knowing whose bids were honest and whose were dishonest, he decided to gamble on a game contract, realizing that if it was doubled, his partner could always run to four diamonds.

West correctly opened a low heart, which South won with the King. East took the second trick with the diamond Ace and returned a heart. The Declarer decided from the bidding that the Ace of hearts was in the East hand and went up with the Queen, although it would have been a better play to stay off at least once. West, of course, won with the heart Ace and laid down the Knave. Since the suit was blocked, West now had a guess whether to play spades or clubs in order to allow East to collect his heart tricks. Unfortunately, the West player guessed wrong and led a club, and the Declarer was able to take the balance of the tricks. The club Queen in Dummy won the trick and Declarer discarded all his remaining losers on the established diamonds.

As the result, the Declarer made four notrump, whereas if West had returned a spade instead of a club at Trick 5 the three notrump contract would have been defeated four tricks.

Field for Social Work Is Widened

Professional Status Is Achieved by Class.

Social work, unheard of 25 years ago, has now become a real profession, the benefit of which extends to nearly 20,000,000 Americans, Elwood Street, director of the Community Chest, declared last night.

He pointed out that while at the beginning of the century, social work was known as charity, there are now more than 30,000 social workers regularly engaged in the profession. It is not a highly paid profession and its top salaries are limited, Mr. Street said. Social workers, he emphasized, "must be comforted in their lack of financial reward by the sense of satisfaction they obtain through being of service to their fellow man."

Those Irish Jokes On Sale in Boston Irk Consul No End

Boston, March 13 (AP).—P. Galwey Foley, Irish Free State Consul at Boston, today sought the cooperation of Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield in preventing the sale of St. Patrick's Day cards "of an un-Irish character and in some cases insulting to the Irish people."

The consul described one of the objectionable cards as showing a thatched cottage littered with bricks and whisky bottles. A flower pot is shown as though it had been thrown through a window of the cottage, the consul said, and the caption read, "Just an old Irish custom."

John T. Hughes, lawyer, who joined with Foley in voicing objections, said: "Many of the cards are ridiculous if they are supposed to represent any sentiment connected either with Ireland or St. Patrick."

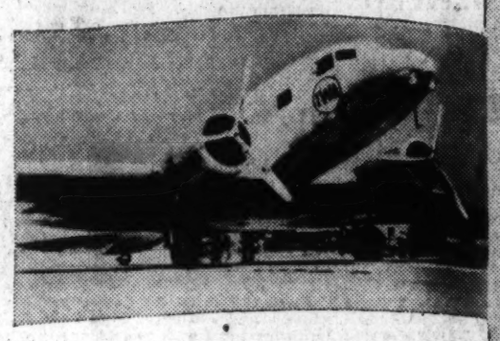
"AN EYE TO THE FUTURE — AN EAR TO THE GROUND"
— this describes General Motors' policy, a policy by which the public is given what it wants in better cars year after year, and yet is safely protected against ill-timed or dubious experiments

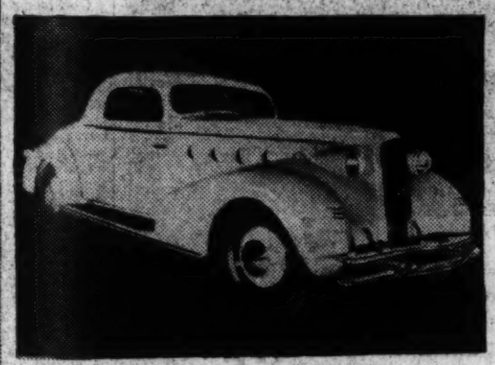
• NEW DOUGLAS TRANSPORT AIRPLANE BUILT FOR GM AFFILIATE



Illustrative of General Motors' familiarity with practical streamlining is the new 200-miles-an-hour Douglas transport airplane, which recently made a coast-to-coast passenger flight in 13 hours 4 minutes 30 seconds. This handsomely streamlined ship was built to specifications of TWA, an organization affiliated with General Motors' aviation interests.

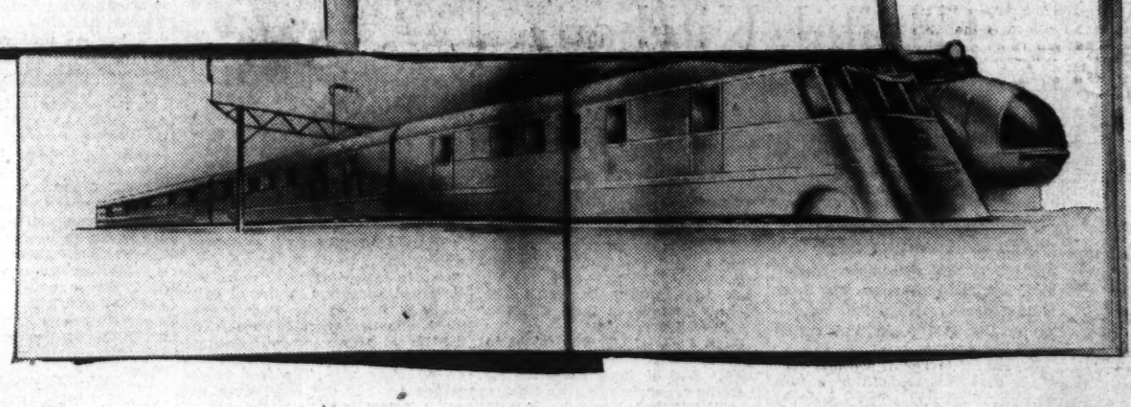
• POPULAR TASTE APPROVES NEW GM STREAMLINE CARS

Verified in advance by more than a million letters sent to car owners asking what they wanted in better cars, the new General Motors streamline styles are today receiving an enthusiastic welcome by the whole public. The new La Salle, for example, illustrated here is being acclaimed universally for its beautiful streamlining.



STREAMLINE TRAINS POWERED BY ENGINES OF GM DESIGN

Both the new two-miles-a-minute streamline Union Pacific train and the new Burlington Zephyr are powered by the remarkably low-operating-cost Winton engines developed by General Motors engineers.



All in the Family!

YOU hear it said now that the new cars of General Motors are as notable for their streamlined beauty as for their gliding ride and the perfection of their No-Draft Ventilation.

Some remark how accurately their sleek styling meets the public's taste, in a tone tinged by surprise.

Yet, when the facts are known, it is easy to understand why the style of these new cars met the popular taste so accurately.

On the technical side, General Motors has been identified with every recent advance in streamlining. Trains, planes and cars — they were "all in the family."

But we never forget that there is another side to car designing — and that is knowing what the public wants in better cars.

So, before our 1934 cars were built, we checked many engineering possibilities and designs with the great family of American car owners — by more than a million letters inviting the public to express its desires.

That is why in Streamlining, as in No-Draft Ventilation and Knee-Action Wheels, General Motors offers advancements in 1934 distinguished not only by their worth but by their popular reception.

HOW GENERAL MOTORS LEADERSHIP KEEPS IN STEP WITH YOUR DESIRES

FIRST—The vast and varied activities in research and experiment pursued by General Motors cover virtually the whole field of transportation. Its work in aero-streamlining over many years, for example, embraces airplanes, automobiles, even railway trains.

SECOND—Through the largest automotive dealer organization in the world General Motors is in close understanding of the public mind; and every year this understanding is verified and double-checked — last year through more than a million questionnaires mailed to owners of all makes of cars.★

THIRD—It is a hard and fast policy of General Motors to suffer its own mistakes, to test and prove every innovation under conditions beyond those of normal use, to protect the buyer against any experiment of doubtful utility or value.

FOURTH—The balanced excellence of General Motors cars in 1934 as in other years includes ample and numerous features such as safe, smart, roomier Fisher Bodies, perfected No-Draft Ventilation, Knee-Action Wheels, smoother, more powerful motors, better brakes, to mention just a few.

This medallion commemorates the twenty-fifth anniversary of General Motors and of its public-minded interest in the advancement of motor transportation.

GENERAL MOTORS
A Public-Minded Institution

★ Last year the Customer Research Staff of General Motors mailed a questionnaire, "The Proving Ground of Public Opinion," to more than 1,500,000 owners of all makes of cars asking what features they most desired in their next cars. The Automobile Buyer's Guide is based on this extensive survey. If you haven't obtained your copy address Customer Research Staff, General Motors, Detroit, Michigan

Board Bars Liquor Near City Schools

400-Feet Rule Adopted as General Policy in Issuing Licenses.

Exceptions to Be Made; Applicants Will Get Public Hearings.

The Liquor Control Board yesterday adopted a policy against issuance of licenses within 400 feet of school buildings and decided to invoke its discretionary powers in cases beyond the prescribed distance where the establishment is patronized by school children.

In certain cases the rule against the issuance of licenses within the 400-foot distance may be modified, Chairman George W. Offutt announced. However, he pointed out, the fact that the establishment is within the prescribed distance would in itself create a case against the applicant, and the license seeker would have to show by a preponderance of evidence that the place is an "appropriate" one.

This policy is similar to that urged by Henry I. Quinn, of the Board of Education; George E. Sullivan, of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Charles I. Stengle, of the D. C. Public School Association, and Harry N. Stull, of the District Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations.

Regulations were amended by the District Commissioners so as to provide that the measurement of the 400 feet shall be from the nearest point of the school grounds, rather than from the entrances to the school building.

The declaration of policy brings to a close the rift between civic and educational leaders and the Liquor Control Board. The opponents of granting licenses in the school areas declared the board should use its discretionary powers in refusing permits to applicants in the affected areas, while the Liquor Board had leaned to the view that a good reason should be shown before the license is denied.

Hearings are to be scheduled on more than 20 cases, which have been held in abeyance pending the formulation of the policy. In each case, Mr. Offutt said, the residents of the area as well as interested organizations will be given an opportunity to present their views.

The policy proposed by the representatives of the various civic and educational associations was somewhat more rigid than that ultimately adopted. It was proposed that the board refuse all licenses for places within 400 feet of a school, except drug stores.

Tito Schipa Sings Tonight in Gotham

Metropolitan Tenor to Appear Here March 20.

Tito Schipa, lyric tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, who is to give a recital March 20, in Constitution Hall, appears this evening in New York in his annual Carnegie Hall recital, singing practically the same program that he will present here.

Numbers listed on both programs are Luporini's "Sogno di Marzo," Scarlatti's "La Violette," Walter Kramer's "Pleading," Richard Hageman's "Do Not Go, My Love," Rimski-Korsakov's "The Nightingale," Bellini's "Carovana nella notte," Mancini's "Esperanza," an aria from Wolf-Ferrari's opera, "Le Donne Curiose," and Schipa's own composition, "Serenata Matutina."

Mr. Schipa's Washington recital is under the management of Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey.

Blind Violinist Basso To Give Joint Recital

Abram Haitowitsch, blind violinist and Prince Alexis Obolenski, basso, will be heard in a joint recital this evening at 9 o'clock in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. Nicholas Stember will be at the piano.

The program will begin with the Brahms sonata in D minor for violin and piano. Mr. Haitowitsch will play two groups of solo numbers by Bach, Sarasate, Schubert, Drigo, Glinka and De Falla. Prince Obolenski will sing an aria from Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla," lyrics by Schubert, Lully, Ferrari, Rubinstein, Messager and Dargomizhski, and three Russian folk songs arranged by Shvedov.

Rents House

H. A. Simon, 500 H street northwest, wanted to rent the property at 602 Columbia road northwest. So he called a Washington Post Ad-Writer and for three days his property was advertised (only four lines) in The Post Classified columns.

On the third day, Mr. Simon telephoned that the house was rented. In fact, he said he could have rented the house twice!

The original order called for a seven-time insertion of the ad, which would have cost him $2.80. But the ad cost was only $1.56—since he was charged only with the days the ad actually ran.

Came a Rapping, Then a Tapping; the Zoo Impatiently Awaits Soko's Spring Sock

Post Staff Photos.

Hoping for winter's end so they can get their first taste of the outdoors this year, these Zoo denizens are becoming right impatient with their cooped-up winter quarters. Above, the pair of Sumatran tigers which are occupying the "hospital" temporarily while the lion house is being renovized. Johanna, the lioness, and her cub, Rose, are also eviction victims. They are shown in center photo, with Head Keeper William L. Blackburn. Below, Jumbina, the African elephant, which would yield a peck of peanuts for a good romp outside.

Birds and Beasts Feel the Vernal Urge Once Again.

When Soko starts to rap on the door—that's spring.

Soko is the zoo's senior chimpanzee. Don't be misled by the fact he's housed in the lion house. So is the hippopotamus.

Some day, maybe, there will be an appropriation for needed buildings and—but that's getting away from Soko.

A Post reporter went out to see whether the chimp had launched his perennial attack on the door which separates him from the outdoor cage. No, he hadn't, but the frisky ape wasn't taking his eyes off the lions' cages very often.

As Head Keeper William L. Blackburn explains it, Soko is impatiently waiting for the lifting of the barriers which will send his leonine companions out for their first whiff of spring ozone because that means he will be next. The big cats are hardier than anthropoids like Soko, who might catch cold or even contract pneumonia if he were let out too soon.

Ready to Take the Rap.

Just as soon as Josef, Nino and the other lions are given the run of their respective solaria, Soko will commence a continuous pounding upon his partition until he, too, can slip out for a look at the new season.

It's been a long, hard winter and all the animals—the polar bears possibly excepted—are demonstratively impatient for its end. Prematurely, perhaps, but none the less prophetically, every toucan in the birdhouse was singing or chattering yesterday when the reporter and Dr William M. Mann, director of the Zoo, visited the birdhouse.

Another sign of spring, beamed the doctor.

Although it was a rigorous winter, there was only one death attributable to the weather, he pointed out proudly. That was a spectacled owl. A happy contrast to the winter of 1912, when the lives of 43 animals were snuffed out by cold.

Warm weather, bringing with it a great increase in the number of visitors, will find the zoological garden wearing a sporty complexion vastly different from the one it had last autumn. Credit goes to the Civil Works Administration, which is contributing a flight cage for the California condors, a sheep mountain, a chimney for the birdhouse, several animal buildings and numerous other improvements.

Among the others is a complete going over of the lion house, which is now closed to the public while workmen are laying a new floor, overhauling the cages and making many other changes. On Monday, three lions and two tigers were moved out so the alterations could proceed. They were sent to the "hospital," which is not a hospital, but a sort of reserve quarters, there to join a pair of leopards which were evicted earlier. Their exile will last about a month longer.

Two lions and the pair of jaguars were not bothered. When work is finished in the cells now vacant, the remaining cats will be shifted into them so that carpenters and masons can get to the rest of the cages.

At present, they are getting ready to lay a new floor in the cage next to the one in which Josef, an active 7-year-old lion roars and belligerently paces to and fro because spring is too long coming and because he wants to go back into his own cage down there at the end.

Who's Afraid of the——

Intimidated by Josef's unquenchable spirit, the carpenters asked if they might not nail a few extra braces against the partition before they started on the floor work. The request was granted.

One more lion house note: Its population is going to be increased any day now. Mr. and Mrs. Jaguar. She is in retirement, with hubby nervously waiting fatherhood next door. It will be two or three weeks after the youngsters arrive until their spotted mammy emerges to show them off.

Ah, spring!

The vernal atmosphere has even affected the multicolored starlings, handsome but captive cousins of the Capitol dome breed, which is now migrating northward. Lamprocolius ayrobius, as you may call the glossy starling for short, was preening his iridiscent feathers yesterday and singing lustily. So was the yellow-breasted splendid starling.

Hurry up, then, spring. Let Soko beat upon his door.

Hill Vigil

Typwriter Agents' Sales Tactics Revealed.

A new type of lobbyist was revealed yesterday when hearings on the legislative appropriations bill were released.

South Trimble, clerk of the House, told the committee that typewriter salesmen often "whisper in a secretary's ear that it is time to get a new typewriter."

He explained that the normal useful life of a typewriter on Capitol Hill is three years and that typewriter salesmen watch the serial numbers and are on hand to tip off the secretary when the time is up.

"I have told them all that if I hear of any typewriter company suggesting that they get a new machine, I will blacklist them," Trimble said.

Botanist Will Talk On Spring Planting

G. A. Stevens, secretary of the American Rose Society, will speak on "Selections of Varieties of Roses for Spring Planting," at a meeting of the Potomac Rose Society tomorrow at 8 p. m. in Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Business Men Urge Substitute Military Road

Arlington County Manager Tells Committee Plans Already Under Way.

Construction of a substitute route for Military road, which bisects Washington-Hoover Airport, was urged by the streets and avenues committee of the Washington Board of Trade at a luncheon meeting yesterday at Sholl's Restaurant.

Roy Braden, Arlington County manager, told the committee a tentative route had been selected for the substitute road, but declined to reveal details.

Recommendation was made that the extension of Twenty-fifth street from Naylor road to Good Hope road, listed in the six-year improvement program of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst for 1939, be made in 1935. The committee also urged that extension of Prospect avenue in Georgetown be included in the six-year program.

J. Leo Kolb, chairman of the subcommittee appointed to study the program, said his committee had approved the road plans in principle. The program also includes several bridge improvements, which are to be taken up next by Mr. Kolb's committee. In connection with this study, the trade board will be hosts to members of District Senate committees and other officials on an inspection tour of the District bridges next Saturday at 2 p. m.

Labor Board Granted $850,000 for Expenses

Allotment of $350,000 to the National Labor Board to defray expenses during the 1935 fiscal year was announced yesterday by the Public Works Administration. The money will be taken from a fund of $10,000,000 ear-marked to finance the recovery program.

An allotment of $500,000 to the board for expenses until June 30, 1934, previously had been made by the PWA.

House Votes Today on Pay Parley Rule

Administration Leaders Sure Conferees Will Be Uninstructed.

Reduction of Veterans Increases, and "5-5" Plan Predicted.

A compromise on Government pay cut restoration and increased veterans' compensation appeared more likely yesterday, after the independent offices bill reached the House floor, than at any time since the Senate added $354,000,000 in amendments.

Administration spokesmen appeared confident for the first time since the bill was returned that the House today will adopt a rule sending it to conference without instruction, and giving the conferees broad authority to agree virtually to any program.

House leaders predicted that a compromise which would increase allowances for Spanish-American War veterans and World War presumptive cases, but less than provided in Senate amendments, would be adopted.

They anticipate no difficulty in reaching an agreement on pay restoration. It was indicated that the 5-and-5 program may be adopted with some modification, such as the moving up of the effective date of the first 5 per cent from February 1 to March 1, or even to April 1.

Republicans to Back Rule.

Although more than two score Democrats have excused themselves from being bound by the Monday caucus, a number of House Republicans indicated that they may vote for the rule which the committee agreed to report at noon today.

An appeal by Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the Independent Offices sub-committee, yesterday is believed to have turned the tide that threatened adoption of the Senate amendments.

"If you are sincerely desirous of obtaining some concessions for Government employes and veterans," Woodrum told the House, "then you will want this bill sent to conference. But if you would rather merely have an opportunity to talk on veterans' allowances without gaining anything, you will favor a vote on the Senate amendments."

Woodrum said that he believed the President is willing to compose his differences with the advocates of full-pay restoration and veterans' compensations. He said there is no question but that there should be further liberalization in allowances granted Spanish-American War service men and presumptive World War cases.

Unanimous Consent Fails.

Woodrum's appeal came after he had submitted an Appropriations Committee report recommending that all the Senate amendments be disagreed on and that the bill be sent to conference.

He asked for unanimous consent that the report be adopted, and for a time consent appeared possible. But after Representative Snell, minority leader, pointed out that members would have no chance to express their views, several members indicated they were prepared to object.

Previously, Snell and Representatives Taber (Republican) New York, and Cooper (Republican) Ohio, expressed a wish to be heard on the pay and veterans' issues, and Representative Britten (Republican) Illinois, stated that he stood ready to vote for full pay restoration for Government employes.

During a discussion between Snell and Woodrum, it was brought out that there was a difference of only about $125,000,000 between the Senate amendments as adopted and those proposed by Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina.

Woodrum pointed out, however, that the President never has said he approved the Byrnes proposals, despite the general belief they were an Administration program.

Agreement in Few Days.

Immediately after objection was voiced to the unanimous consent request, Woodrum announced that he would ask for a special rule to carry the Appropriations Committee's recommendation. The Rules Committee held a special meeting and voted to report favorably on the request.

Later, Woodrum predicted that the rule would be adopted with some Republican support and that the conferees would be able to reach an agreement within a few days.

Before making their report to the House, the Democratic conferees will have to present their agreement to another caucus. Should the conferees fail to agree on either of the controversial issues, that amendment would be presented to the House for a separate vote.

If the conferees reach an agreement, however, the House will be able to vote only once on the report and will be unable to amend it. In case the special rules fails to pass today, the Appropriations Committee will present the Senate amendments for separate voting, Woodrum said.

Hospital Guild to Meet.

The Women's Guild of Sibley Hospital will meet at 10:45 a. m. tomorrow in Rust Hall, with Mrs. S. A. Mooers presiding. Devotional services will be in charge of Dr. Dan Ennis, of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. Marie Deal will sing. Plans for a linen shower April 6 will be discussed.

To Serve on D. C. Parole Board

C. F. Sudwarth, Mason, Printer, Is Dead at 77

Found in Gas-Filled Room by Daughter-in-Law Unconscious.

Charles E. Sudwarth, 77, of 37 U street northwest, prominent Mason and former head of a printing firm bearing his name, died early yesterday, less than an hour after his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mabel Sudwarth, found him unconscious in the gas-filled kitchen of his home.

Mr. Sudwarth had suffered three strokes of paralysis, and members of his family said yesterday they believed he had another while trying to light his pipe from the gas stove, as was his habit. In falling he may have opened the jet, they said.

Mrs. Sudwarth found him unconscious about 12:30 a. m. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald pronounced Sudwarth dead at 1:20 a. m. and ordered a postmortem examination to determine whether death was due to paralysis or gas.

Born in Newcastle, Ind., where he published a newspaper, Sudwarth came to Washington to work in the Government Printing Office in 1896. A few years later he established the Sudwarth Printing Co., which he operated for more than 30 years. Three years ago he retired from business because of failing health.

A daughter, Mrs. Ruth E. O'Connell, and a son, W. L. Sudwarth, survive. Besides his Masonic affiliations, he was a member of other organizations, including the Izaak Walton League. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery, with full Masonic rites after services at his home tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Dr. Willard Chosen Head of Illinois U.

Chicago, March 13 (AP).—Dr. Arthur Cutts Willard, acting dean of the School of Engineering at the University of Illinois, was chosen by the board of trustees tonight to become president of the university, succeeding Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, who resigned several months ago.

Prof. Willard will become the seventh president of the University on July 1, when the term of Dr. Arthur H. Daniels, as acting president, expires.

Mrs. W. L. Libby's Rites Set Today

Former D. C. Resident to Be Buried at Arlington.

Mrs. Libby, who was the wife of Capt. William L. Libby, was graduated from George Washington University in 1916. For the past eight months she had been visiting her parents. Death followed a lengthy illness.

Her husband and a son, 7; her parents, two sisters and a brother survive.

Drive on Social Vice Is Launched

Privilege of Forfeiting Collateral Ended.

Police Court Judge Ralph Given has inaugurated a stern campaign to curb the Capital's "social vice" by withdrawing the privilege of forfeiting collateral in such cases from now on, suspects will have to face the court.

It was revealed yesterday that he has ordered attachments issued for 24 women who were arrested last week and then released after posting an aggregate $600 collateral. His action means they must stand trial.

Six women were arraigned yesterday, each being fined $25.

Brown to Make Hucksters Move

Authorized to "Clean Up" Area in Southwest.

Hucksters who use the square bounded by Tenth, Eleventh, F and G streets southwest, will have to move.

Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown reported to the Commissioners that the square is now being used by retail hucksters, who have erected unsightly shacks.

Youth Held for Jury On Rum Theft Counts

William S. Ennis, 26, a law student, was held for grand jury action in Police Court yesterday, after arraignment on three charges of housebreaking.

Ennis, who lives in the 1600 block K street northwest, was charged with smashing the windows of three liquor stores last week. He pleaded not guilty and was held under $1,000 bond. Police said two liquor store windows were broken in the 900 block Seventeenth street northwest, and another at Seventeenth and H streets northwest.

Police Given Emergency Relief Power

Can Issue Fuel or Food Orders Under Plan to Speed Aid.

All District policemen will be authorized to issue orders for fuel or food in relief emergencies under a plan approved yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen, who also ordered rental of 14 new relief centers to replace the present 5.

Disputes between the Welfare Board and the District Commissioners also appeared to have been smoothed over yesterday. Sidney F. Talliaferro, who criticized the commission in submitting his resignation, agreed to serve until expiration of his term on June 30.

It was also disclosed that among the recommendations made by the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole, which Dr. Loren B. Johnson asserted were unheeded by the Commissioners, was a suggestion that the board chairman be paid $5,000 a year, and the two members be given $3,000.

9 Field Workers Sought.

In his resignation, which was accepted yesterday, Dr. Johnson declared the failure of the Commissioners to appropriate necessary funds made the office a useless one. In addition to salaries, he asked for nine field parole workers, and a number of clerks, whose total salaries would be $41,000.

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride, who will be replaced tomorrow by E. Barrett Prettyman, was named chairman of the Parole Board to fill the vacancy caused by the appointment of Isaac Gans to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. Wilbur La Roe was appointed to take Dr. Johnson's place.

Under Commissioner Allen's emergency relief plan, a policeman, after investigation of an emergency appeal, will be authorized to issue an order on any store under a relief contract with the District.

Seeks to Speed Relief.

After the policeman has given emergency aid, the case will be referred to the Emergency Relief headquarters. The policeman would issue only the necessities for immediate relief.

Commissioner Allen's plan for relief agencies in localities where there are a number of relief appeals is designed, he said, for faster response. His plan is to have about 1,000 cases cared for by each of the proposed 14 centers. Allen believes money will be saved under the new set-up, despite cost of the centers.

When Bride accepted chairmanship of the Parole Board, he said: "I have no desire to accept this office, because I know it will require a great deal of my time. I declined the position yesterday; but the Commissioners, who have been very kind to me, asked me to reconsider, and I accept it for an indefinite time."

Victim of Cab Accident Asks $22,500 Damages

Damages of $22,500 were asked of the Bell Cab Co. in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Mrs. Anna Goldenberg, mother of Melvin Goldenberg, a minor.

The mother claimed her son had been hurt seriously when he was struck by a cab owned by the company, at Sixteenth and Q streets northwest, January 16. The suit asked $2,500 for the mother because of expenses incurred, and $20,000 for the boy.

Service Station Robbed.

James R. Andrews, cashier of the Firestone Service Station, 1300 block of K street northwest, yesterday reported the loss of $145 from a cash register. He said thieves entered early yesterday and robbed the till.

Rat-a Tat Tat of Drills Ruin Rest, 15 Citizens Tell Court

The Sardo Construction Co. was engaged to repair and enlarge sewers near Fifth and Ingraham streets northwest. Rainstorms brought complaints of flooded cellars and "unsightly" conditions.

Residents had protested they were forced to wade through deep water due to inadequate sewer facilities. The Sardo company was working to remedy the situation.

M. A. Sardo, president, testified his firm was working under emergency conditions, at times, 24 hours a day. Complaining citizens said steam drills and machinery disturbed their sleep.

Kuhel Likely Victor in Fight With Griffith for $3,000 Pay Boost

Value to Nats Big Point in His Favor

Batted .322 Last Year and Fielded Position to Taste of All.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

BILOXI, Miss., March 13—Evidence that Clark C. Griffith, of the Griffith Stadium Griffiths, is fighting a losing battle with Joe Kuhel, who is holding out baseball's largest pair of hands for a considerable sum of money over and above what he is offered, was apparent here today when Griffith reopened negotiations in the form of another and more attractive proposition.

Demanding a $3,000 increase, no less, in his $6,500 salary of last year, Kuhel has flatly rejected a $1,500 raise offered by the Nats' owner, and the deeply-furrowed brow of Griffith, whenever the subject is mentioned by the correspondents, speaks eloquently of the serious thought he is giving the matter.

Griffith On the Spot.

Griffith may haggle with Cliff Bolton and the lesser lights on his ball club, but with Kuhel he is on the spot. The Nats have no more need for Kuhel than a fish has for gills. The first baseman is negotiating from the vantage point of his importance to the Washington Ball Club.

There is no available man either on the club or around the league who is to be mentioned in the same breath with Kuhel as a first baseman. Replacing him would mean the expenditure of $75,000 in cash or players, and Griffith is not investing that amount in these parlous times, especially when only $1,500 stands between him and the lad who batted .322 last year while playing first base to the king's taste, as well as the queen's.

In a Position to Demand.

If ever a ball player was in a position to enforce his demands Kuhel is that guy. Kuhel will play with the Nats in 1934—that's as certain as death, taxes and shrimp for dinner here tomorrow night. But when he signs it will be for a bit more coin of Griffith's realm.

The holdout gestures of Heinie Manush are being discounted here in view of Heinie's known aversion to signing until the last possible moment and reporting for training at the same time. Griffith expects Manush, who batted a noble .336 last season, to play for the same amount he received last year, but along about Friday evening Manush will blow into camp, demand another thousand or so, and probably get a $500 increase.

The boys were looking at better pitching today in batting practice when virtually all the big shots of the 1933 staff ascended the rubber and let out another notch in both speed and curves, although the latter item is still taboo as far as Cronin can enforce the order. But keeping a pitcher from showing his curve is like keeping Altrock from showing a funny face.

Klumpp Prospect.

If you happen to have yesterday's paper or the sheet of any day during the past week, it isn't necessary to read this paragraph, but the fact remains that this Elmer (Yoohoo) Klumpp is causing the breasts of Cronin and Griffith to beat high with hope at the prospect of another swell catcher on the staff.

They are reserving official opinion on Klumpp until he dons the full catcher's paraphernalia and shows a throwing arm, but they are tumbling over themselves in lauding the general deportment of the clean-cut lad from Chattanooga, who is taking a vicious cut at the ball. He has been a power at bat in every league he ever worked.

The situation among the rookie pitchers is finally beginning to crystallize, with Mike Radonovich, the Gary (Ind.) southpaw, and Leonard Phillips, the Camp Meade corporal, the only pair among the second-flight of hurlers to cause even a flurry of excitement. The others, Andy Sierra, Steve Molnar, Schopp Demoran and Williams, are all nice lads, but——.

Hagerstown Session To Plan New League

Hagerstown, Md., March 13 (Spl.).—A four-club circuit, and perhaps one of six clubs, may be organized at a meeting of baseball enthsiasts in the Cumberland Valley here tomorrow night. The league would be an amateur loop and play on Saturdays and Sundays.

Martinsburg, Winchester, Frederick and Hagerstown already have indicated favor of such a circuit, and Waynesboro and Chambersburg likewise may join.

Middle Atlantic Loop Calls Meeting Sunday

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 13 (Spl.).—Notice has been issued by Elmer M. Dailey, of Ebensburg, Pa., president of the Middle Atlantic Baseball League, for the second annual winter meeting of the organization to be held Sunday at Wheeling.

The league season is now scheduled to begin May 9 and the schedule for the season is to be arranged at the meeting. Other affairs also will be given attention.

Carnera-Baer Bout Plans Nearing

Dispute Over Gate Cut Is Reported Settled; Date Uncertain.

NEW YORK, March 13 (AP).—The status of the prize fight every one wants—a heavyweight title match between Primo Carnera and Max Baer—today was pretty much that of a pneumonia patient after about three days in a hospital.

"There has been no change in the condition of the patient," said Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden, carrying out the illusion. "The situation is satisfactory and we are waiting for something to happen."

In this respect, the situation had not changed a bit since last summer, when Baer knocked out Max Schmeling. Carnera flattened Jack Sharkey for the title, and all the promoters in the country started campaigning for a bout between the winners.

In Secret Huddles.

Ancil Hoffman, manager of Baer, and Louis Soresi, pilot of Carnera, went into more secret huddles with Jimmy Johnson, in charge of boxing at the Garden, with no more results than were achieved yesterday when it was prematurely reported that the match had been signed for next September. Johnston started the Garden's major offensive by going to Chicago to lure Hoffman within shouting distance.

While no one in authority has broken down with a confession of details, it was learned the two major difficulties in the way of the match have been smoothed away.

Baer will receive more than the challenger's usuual share of the gate receipts, 12½ per cent, and from this he will reimburse Jack Dempsey, his patron. Dempsey lifted Baer into the limelight by staging the Schmeling bout last June. The Garden, however, has refused to accept him as a partner in the present business.

Debate as to Date.

There is still considerable difference of opinion as to the best time to stage the match, to be held in the Garden bowl on Long Island. Kilpatrick and the Baer forces prefer June. Carnera, involved in bankruptcy proceedings, would rather go touring for a time until the court action is out of the way. He prefers not to earn any large money until September.

Announcement that the match has been made is expected within a few days.

Emory-Henry Gridmen Will Play Chattanooga

Emory, Va., March 13 (Spl.).—Emory and Henry's football team will play in Johnson City, Tenn., next fall, after several years' absence, meeting the University of Chattanooga eleven there on November 17 in the closing game of its 1934 season.

Prospects for another strong club at Emory and Henry this season are bright. Coach Pedre Jackson will return enough veterans to provide a foundation for a strong club.

Near Record for Boos

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, March 13 (Spl.).—New York's eighth annual Golden Gloves amateur boxing tournament went shimmering, glittering and roaring into history at Madison Square Garden last evening, a grand and amazing show which, in the time of boxing's worst doldrums, again drew 19,000 people into the arena and collected a gate of some $45,000 gross. It was again distinguished by one of those demonstrations of mass indignation which seem to have become peculiar and exclusive only to Golden Gloves shows—the long distance or endurance razz—last night's demonstration, which came at the end of the bout between Mark Hough and Gus Lesnovich, lasted exactly seven and one-half minutes by the stop watch of our special Boo-timer. It was exciting and terrifying enough while it lasted, though not to be compared with the all-time record booing at the end of the Pasculli-Alvarez bout in the 1931 tourney, which lasted for 21 minutes flat. The fans are softening up, or high living has shortened their breath and got them out of condition.

The storm that blew about the heads of the officials when at the end of three close rounds was ruled that Hough, one of the earlier colored champions, had beaten Lesnovich, last year's novice champion in the 160-pound class, was an awe-inspiring thing in its intensity.

The Garden seemed to sway and rock under the noise. One couldn't hear one's self speak, one couldn't think, and it is a curious property of this mass madness, this mob roar, that after a while one seems to be hearing it inside of one. It penetrates to one's very core, vibrates inside one, and if one isn't used to it, scares the hell out of one.

But I can never bring myself to believe that the populace is quite as angry as it pretends to be over the particular offense, that they should be so fearfully outraged because one comparative stranger is rated better than another stranger, even granting the difference in the color of their skins, a matter that always seems a matter of great pride and concern to a lot of people.

Hough and Lesnovich had had a good, close fight which I thought Hough won on his showing in the first two rounds and the early part of the third round. In the last minute, Lesnovich, a strong, tough, rugged boy, finally nailed the shifty Hough with a right and drove him half through the ropes and then followed up his advantage with a fine flurry of fighting. Apparently on the strength of that one punch the crowd gave it to Lesnovich and broke into a terrific tantrum when the judges ruled otherwise.

I remember walking around the arena while it was going on, looking the situation over, trying to gauge how serious it was, whether there would be any outbreaks that might touch the mob off into action. Individuals with distorted faces rose up in their seats and shook their fists at me, or shouted something, or waved both hands violently.

The ground was quivering with the thunder of angry voices and I was suddenly struck with the conviction that every one was having the best possible time, that the bellowing, screaming customers were enjoying themselves immensely and that they really owed us a debt of gratitude for giving them the opportunity to enjoy this catharsis.

I do not really suppose there were more than a hundred in that angry 19,000 who cared deeply that Lesnovich had not won. What were they yelling at? I don't know—the NRA taxes. The burdens left over by the Hoover Administration. The rent collector. The boss. Hard times. The guy who stole their girl, the girl who stole their fellow. The inclement weather—anything. The sheer joy of letting off steam, of indulging in a terrific public beef. The fulsome feeling that comes from shouting somebody down. It is a relief, a relaxation, a tonic and a stimulant all in one.

I watched the customers leave the arena after the show. They all had color in their faces and pleased smiles on their lips. They stepped firmly and briskly. They were without inhibitions. They had unloaded something from their chests.

Compared to this great mass experience the issue seems trivial. I wouldn't want to swear on a witness stand that amateur Hough had defeated amateur Lesnovich, and if an injustice was done to amateur Lesnovich, I am sorry, and yet the boy was really but the catalytic agent that set off a great human combustion and apparently a necessary one. He tried very, very hard and very honestly to beat Hough and the judges said that he had failed. Many of us give our level best and other judges say that we have lost when we feel that we have won. Perhaps some of that exasperation was in that great cry of outrage, too. Whatever it was, I feel that those who took part in it owe Hough and Lesnovich and the two judges and the referee a vote of gratitude. It isn't often that 19,000 can let off steam all at once.

2 District Pros Team Up for Matches Against Best in Country.

By Dave Herman.

WHEN the District golf season moves into full swing, two of the best players in this section, both former amateur stars now seeking fame and fortune as professionals, will team up in matches against Nationally known golfers.

Mackenzie, three times a member of famous American Walker Cup teams, recently assumed the professional reins at Congressional, while Houghton is celebrating his fourth year at Kenwood.

Become Accomplice.

Virtually all amateur players who turned pro have become howling successes. Notable examples are Tommy Armour, the Black Scot, the former Congressional pro, who since abandoning amateur toga has won virtually every important major golf championship, including the American, British and Canadian Open crowns. Shute, son of a West Virginia pro, realized a life-long ambition last summer by winning the historic British Open championship after a play-off with his countryman, Craig Wood.

Thus, according to tradition, Houghton and Mackenzie should make good as pros. Mackenzie was a member of the 1926-'28-'30 Walker Cup teams captained by Bobby Jones, and suffered the loss of only one point in the three combats against the British team. He won the National Amateur medal in 1925 at Oakmont, and was an internationally known player for more than six years. He went to the National Amateur semifinals in 1927. Mackenzie is a pupil of Fred McLeod, 1908 Open champion, and owes much of his success to the veteran Columbia pro.

Houghton is one of the 30 leading pros in America, and his golfing feats have served to make him a distinct threat in every big event. Last year he won more than $2,000 in tournament prize money, having placed fourth in the Canadian Open and being nosed out by Johnny Hines by one shot for the famous Glens Falls championship.

The Kenwood pro is the only man in golf who has participated in the four National championships—the Open, Amateur, Public Links and National P. G. A.

The team of Houghton and Mackenzie promises to be a formidable one, and will roar its challenge at such sterling pros as Denny Shute, Craig Wood, the Deal, N. J., Adonis and leading money winner of the '32-33 season; Joe Kirkwood, Gene Sarazen, former British Open and American Open champion, now P. G. A. title holder; Ed Dudley, Leo Diegel and Paul Runyan, golfdom's "Little Poison," who won the 1933 National Capital Open at Kenwood.

Houghton and Mackenzie, trained in the new school of golf, both powerfully long drivers and deadly iron shooters, are expected to inaugurate their exhibition series next month, possibly against Wood and Runyan. If present plans materialize, they will engage at least six members of the 1933 Ryder Cup team.

Jean Borotra Is Net Upset Victim

Feret, Boussus Beaten, Leaving Only Merlin of French Aces.

NEW LORK, March 13 (U.P.).—Jean Borotra's bid for his fifth American National indoor singles championship came to an unexpected finish today when he was defeated, 2—6, 10—8, 6—3, by Frank Bowden, of New York, a stocky youngster who stands no better than twenty-fifth in the National ranking.

JEAN BOROTRA

Borotra, a veteran of many Davis Cup battles and admittedly the finest player on boards in the world, was an odds-on favorite at the start of the match. And when he swept through the first set with the loss of but a smattering of points, you could have written your own ticket on Bowden. Then, in some mysterious fashion, Bowden gathered the shattered bits of his game and moulded an attack that literally blasted the Frenchman off the court, and a defense that was invulnerable to Borotra's most savage thrusts. During the course of the last two sets Borotra called upon all the knowledge and skill gained in years of international warfare in an effort to break down the youngter's resistance, but at the finish Bowden was hitting out with magnificent power and precision. An dthe Basque, his face drawn with fatigue, was stroking feebly and ineffectively.

Powerful Forehand.

Bowden's chief weapons were a forehand of beautiful length, that kept Borotra from the net, and a service that drove home with punishing force. His backhand rates praise, too, for it refused to crack under Borotra's ceaseless hammering.

Bowden's only outstanding victory before today came in 1931 when he eliminated Sidney B. Wood in an early round of the men's Nationals at Forest Hills.

Borotra's defeat reduced the French delegation to one man, for earlier in the day Christian Boussus had bowed to George Lott, 5—7, 6—3, 6—4, and Paul Feret had fallen before the cannonading of Dr. Eugene McCauliff, 6—4, 6—4. The lone Frenchman to gain the quarterfinals was Andre Merlin, who rallied gamely to defeat Berkeley Bell, 2—6, 6—3, 6—2.

All of the other favored Americans came through in fine fashion. Lester Stoefen, of California, whose play grows more sensational with the passing of each day, smashed his way to a 6—3, 6—3, victory over Dr. Lawrence Kurzrok, of New York. Stoefen's service was absolutely untouchable, and he was a sharpshooter in nailing the corners with his volleys and drives.

Mangin Wins Handily.

Gregory Mangin, who is seeking his third successive championship, showed to advantake in trouncing Melvin Partridge, of New Rochelle, N. Y., 6-2, 6-2. The inflamed eye which threatened to keep him out of the tournament was much improved today, and he was hitting with his customary viciousness.

Frank Shields towed with one William Thompson for three sets before winning 6—1, 3—6, 6—0. In the final set, which saw Frank in top stride, Thompson scored fewer than a dozen points.

Sidney B. Wood did a deal of experimenting in defeating Simon Miller, of New York, 9—7, 6—1. In the opening set Wood tried to make all his shots in the most difficult manner possible. In the second he settled down and Mr. Miller soon was under the showers.

Tomorrow's schedule calls for Shields vs. McCauliff; Stoefen vs. Lott; Mangin vs. Merlin and Wood vs. Bowden, with all the first mentioned favored.

First round doubles was contested today with all favorites coming through.

"Y" Swimmers Busy.

Schmeling Issues Neusel Challenge

Berlin, March 13 (AP).—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, issued a formal challenge today to Walter Neusel, Teuton youngster now campaigning in the United States, for a match that would settle definitely the German heavyweight title.

Schmeling asked the Hamburg promoter, Rothenberg, to open negotiations for such a match in the big Hamburg outdoor ring in June.

Neusel, who was awarded a decision over King Levinsky in Madison Square Garden last Friday night, has never met Schmeling and both claim the German championship. Neusel now is formally recognized as the titleholder, since Schmeling relinquished the championship, and has not fought here, since making his first American invasion half a dozen years ago.

Schmeling will leave for Barcelona tomorrow to start training for his match with Paulino Uzcudun on April 8

Giants Bunch Hits; Blank Macks

FORT MYERS, Fla., March 13 (AP).—Three singles, hit by Hughie Critz, Mel Ott, and George Davis in the sixth inning, produced the only run the New York Giants needed to defeat the Philadelphia Athletics 1 to 0 in the final game of their spring exhibition series. The victory was the fourth for the world champions.

Hal Schumacher, Clyde Castleman, and Watson Clark blanked the A's with seven hits. The Giants got one less off Merritt (Sugar) Cain, Leroy Mahaffey, and John Marcum but the three-hit rally in the sixth did the damage.

New York (N.)	000 001 000	1	6	3
Philadelphia (A.)	000 000 000	0	7	0

Schumacher, Castleman, Clark and Richards; Cain, Mahaffey, Marcum and Madjeski.

Browns Squad Complete.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 13 (AP). — Oscar Melillo and Arthur Scharein arrived in camp today, completing the St. Louis Browns' squad.

The Browns, under Rogers Hornsby, have given up their water sports after practice hours. A few years ago the entire squad would throw down their gloves and bats at the end of a practice session and race for the beach.

Cards Set for Giants.

Bradenton, Fla. March 13 (AP).—The Cardinals held batting practice today and their long drives seemed to whistle a tune "bring on the Giants."

Frankie Frisch's men looked forward eagerly to their first exhibition tomorrow with the New York Nationals. As outfielders Orsatti and Watkins remain unsigned, the Redbirds will have only one regular, Medwick, in that position for the game tomorrow.

Reds Dodge "13th."

Tampa, Fla., March 13 (U.P.).—Bob O'Farrell, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, deferring to the "Wednesday the 13th" alleged hoodoo, today deferred until Wednesday the first practice game for his club.

The Reds held only a limited practice today because O'Farrell and six of his trusties had luncheon speaking engagements.

Scrub Games for Braves.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 13 (U.P.). Scrub games for Wednesday and Thursday were ordered today for the Boston Braves. Manager Bill McKechnie said he believed this sort of practice would best prepare the Braves for the regular exhibition season which opens with the New York Yankees on Friday.

Hal Lee, hitherto an outfielder, played in the infield today and may start the Yanks' exhibition series at second in place of Walter Maranville.

Wally Berger is now the only unsigned Braves player not in camp and an ultimatum to him is expected from the club within a day or so.

Eagles Seek Games.

Conference Head Raps Fights

Fletcher Is Quoted as Calling Boxing Money-Making Spectacle.

ROANOKE, Va., March 13 (AP).—Forest Fletcher, president of the Southern Conference, and director of physical education at Washington and Lee University, today was reported to be personally in opposition to collegiate boxing on the ground that it "is not a college sport."

Mr. Fletcher, elected at the last meeting of the conference in February to succeed C. P. Miles, of Virginia Tech, said that he is considering bringing the matter before the next meeting in December. He said that there already has been much talk about it but that he supposes he is the first one to come out in the open definitely.

Called Bloody Spectacle.

Having been quoted in the Ring Tum Phi, Washington and Lee student publication, as saying that boxing "is not a sport, but more of a money making, bloody spectacle," Mr. Fletcher declined to make specific instances where boxing has resulted in harm to a college boxer.

Mr. Fletcher made it understood that he was not taking a stand on the matter, but merely expressing his personal opinion. He also said that he will not attempt to use his position as president of the conference to force the issue.

The Ring Tum Phi quoted Mr. Fletcher as characterizing boxing as little better than "bull fighting." He predicted, the student newspaper said, that within three or four years boxing will have to be done away with in the Southern Conference, and said that even at the University of Virginia athletic officials are inclined to look with disfavor upon the sport.

Maryland Favors Boxing

Officials of the University of Maryland yesterday expressed opposition to the reported proposal of Forest Fletcher, president of the Southern Conference, that collegiate boxing be abolished in the conference. H. C. Byrd, director of athletics, said:

"For the development of the individual, both mental and physical, no better sport has ever been known. It must have the right kind of coaching and be properly controlled. If it is, there is no fault that can be found with it."

Lieut. John W. Harmony, boxing coach, said:

"College boxing, as I have seen it in the conference, is too fine a sport to be eliminated. It is the equal in value to the participant of any intercollegiate sport and I'd hate to see it stopped. The splendid appearances made by the university fighters in the last conference tournament are typical of the sport. It was a grand exhibition and the best possible argument against any effort to abolish the sport."

Few Oppose Boxing.

Roanoke, March 13 (AP).—Athletic Director James J. Driver, of the University of Virginia, although not specifically replying to Fletcher's remarks, said that carefully supervised boxing at the university had proved neither physically nor mentally harmful to the participants.

Injuries, he said, have been fewer than in some other sports, "notably football," and at least half of the Virginia boxers during his term as athletic director have been on "the dean's list of distinguished students."

Blandy Clarkson, athletic director at Virginia Military Institute, said a lack of interest in the sport had forced him to forfeit bouts in freshmen meets this year. "Regardless of the action of other schools," he said "we are for college boxing so long as V. M. I. competitors report in reasonable numbers to our very competent coach, Al Martin."

Bill Raftery, head coach of football at V. M. I. and "son" Read, coach of track, and cross-country, were inclined to agree with Martin, but Ed Hess, cadet football line coach, showed little enthusiasm for the sport because of dangers which, he said, might be attendant to poor supervision.

Dr. A. J. Wilson, North Carolina State College's voting representative in the Southern Conference, said today he had not fully made up his mind on the place of boxing in intercollegiate athletics, but is "rather opposed to closing a season with a tournament. Having a tourney at the end of a season is a little too hard on the fighters. Some boys have to fight two fights a day.

"I don't know whether I would oppose intercollegiate boxing. I haven't made up my mind, but I am rather opposed to closing a season with a tournament."

Coucci Returns, Rides Grannys Trade to Close Hialeah Decision at $19.50

Filly Spurts In Stretch To Win

Two Tricks Triumphs and Returns $37.20; Fraidy Cat Victor.

HIALEAH PARK, March 13 (AP). Silvio Coucci, the popular little Bronx Italian who returned to saddle competition Saturday after an enforced layoff of close to three weeks because of an injury to his calf, got back into the winner's column here today in the fourth race. "Cooch" had the leg up on Mrs. E. Yost's Granny Trade, which ran kindly under the "Bronx Express," to win a close decision at $19.50 for $2.

Earl Porter, now far ahead of Coucci for local riding honors, but who was only on even terms with the Italian lad when Coucci was forced to quit, was up on the favorite, Jack Richardson's Wedding Ring. He bowed to the winner in the last few strides. F. J. Kearns' Chain was third in the blanket finish, another half length behind. The time for the six furlongs was 1:11 2-5.

Wedding Ring Tires.

Wedding Ring was a 9 to 10 choice and when Porter shot him into a quick lead after the start, his supporters figured they had selected the right one. Wedding Ring rang Transen and Meloy into defeat, but he never could get far away and the effort told on him in the final drive. Coucci had brought Grannys Trade up gradually on the outside and the filly wore down the favorite in a thrilling finsh. Chain's move came a trifle late, but he was an easy third.

Two Tricks, with the virtually unknown apprentice, L. Garrett, in the saddle, played a trick on the talent by outrunning her field all the way in the curtain raiser. The daughter of Brooms, hustled right to the front, held her field safe for speed under good handling and finished with a length advantage over Mannerism, while Sky Haven was a well-beaten third. James River, heavy choice, was badly outrun and backers of the three placed horses received lucratice prices. The winner returned $37.20 straight.

Below Zero Triumphs.

Candy Prince, the gray 2-year-old which was so confidently supported in his first start on the strength of sensational morning trials, again failed to make good in the second event. The son of Westy Hogan ran all over the track and finished fourth. Below Zero, steady running filly, led throughout to score by a half length. Tutticurio, bothered several times by the rank Candy Prince, was a hard luck second, a length before Foreign Lady. The winner, heavily backed on form, paid $5.30.

Fraidy Cat, a racy looking young gelding in H. P. Headley's stable, accounted for the second 2-year-old event on the card, leading Dasher to the wire by two lengths to pay $3.40. Dasher was tiring at the end but saved the place from Prosecutor by a half lnegth.

Coucci lost no time in chalking up a double. He had The Bailiff on the head end from start to finish of the fifth contest, his mount handing a two lengths' licking to the hot favorite, Bartering Kate, which chased the winner all the way to the judges. Try Fair was beaten five lengths for the place. The Bailiff returned $7.

Drombo, backed down to $5 for 2, had the speed of the eight platers in the sixth event, registering by three parts of a length under Master Liztenberger. Escadron was second, four spans clear of Gibby's Choice. Drombo repelled the early challenge of Steel and continued smoothly when Escadron made his bid.

Earl Porter kept Stone Martin going to win the final number by a half length from Renewed, with Momo a close third. The winner paid $6.20.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For more than three and a half centuries mines have been worked in the hill called Potosi in Southwestern Bolivia and turned out an untold amount of precious metals and other minerals. Silver to the estimated value of $1,500,000,000 has been mined from Potosi. The amount of gold which has been taken since the first mine was opened in 1546 is unknown, but its estimated value is fabulous.

Silver and gold are not the only metals yielded by the hill—they are, in fact, not even the most important in production now. Tin is the most valuable product at present. Copper is also a highly valuable product of the famous hill.

Virtually every metal known is found in one or another of the 7,000 mines. The ancient people of South America knew of its mineral wealth, according to their legend, but they refused to work it, fearing the wrath of their gods.

Strange as it seems, there is no other spot of exceptional mineral wealth in the same vicinity.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, March 13.

With the doping situation pretty well under control, the stewards are keeping an eagle eye on the last week of racing at this course. They have warned owners, trainers and jockeys that they will stand for no monkey business. Any violations will be referred to the racing commission with recommendations for severe punishment. This move is aimed to balk a number of "good things" that the boys believe have been cooked up for the closing days.

At that, a number of "get-away specials" are chewing oats in the barns awaiting the word to crack down. Today, Granny's Trade ran that race that we all have been awaiting and proved a cinch at 8 to 1.

BILL.

First Race—Granny's Trade put put up a fine sprint today to defeat a fair field. Goes on top if sent back in this mile. Phantom Legion was close yesterday and will have something to say about the purse division here. Bun D has been whispered around and has a fighting chance.

Second Race—Integrity drops weight in this and I see no reason for a miss. Resisting might awake awake to cause troubit. Mannerism turned in a fair effort and figures close if sent postward again.

Third Race—Ogle, of the Widener entry, appears to have the edge on these youngsters. Will have Hope Eternal to defeat. Clocker Mike recommends a shot at Distracting.

Fourth Race—Vishnu came right out of a long rest to run a sizzling race here and on that showing gets the Bennings call. Chief A and In High for the rest. Suspicious goes on top in the mud.

Sixth Race—Big Beau will be hard to beat with only 104 pounds. Some strong riding will turn the trick. Quel Jeu won his last impressively. Curacao should close fast to take the show.

Seventh Race—Spartan Lady has a race here that fits her. Fingal is dangerous. Gallic has demonstrated good form of late and seems the best of the others.

Eighth Race—Bub McFarland gets his 1⅛ miles and will be hard to beat. Polo Bar, much tipped, for the place and Peace Lady for the show.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TWO TRICKS, $37.20, $18.10, $8.70; MANNERISM, $16.00, $8.70; SKY HAVEN, $6.30.

TWO TRICKS broke very fast, assumed long lead early, galloped along in front, and won under wraps. MANNERISM moved up fast around turn and was next best. SKY HAVEN went up all the way, made a game effort. TAUNTON had no mishap. JAMES RIVER ran a miserable race. He lacked speed and failed to close any ground.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs (straightaway); nursery course. Purse, $700. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:47½. Off at 2:50. Winner, C. H. Knebelkamp's blk. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELOW ZERO, $5.30, $3.10, $2.50; TUTTICURIO, $5.20, $3.40; FOREIGN LADY, $4.40.

BELOW ZERO ran straight and clear of interference, drew away, but was doing his very best to win. TUTTICURIO broke fast, but was badly bumped and knocked about by CANDY PRINCE. He recovered quickly and finished with a rush. He could have won but for the interference. FOREIGN LADY finished gamely on the inside and is worth noting. CANDY PRINCE, very tank in the running, was swerving all over the track interfering with horses. WAX ran an improved race. TRY SYMPATHY was unable to keep up.

THIRD RACE—Three furlongs (straightaway); nursery course. The St. Petersburg. Purse, $700. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:16. Off at 3:21½. FRAIDY CAT broke a bit slow, but quickly ran up and into lead. He drew away in last furlong and won nicely in hand. DASHER got away well, showed good speed, and stood long drive gamely. PROSECUTOR was hard ridden from the start and had no mishap. LAIRD ran fine race under weak handling. BOILING POINT is improving and should win soon. NEEDLE, a nice looking filly, has speed and is sure to improve.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:52½. Off at 3:56. Winner, Mrs. E. GRANNY'S TRADE, under perfect handling, worked her way up, came to the outside of WEDDING RING in stretch, closed gamely, and won going away. WEDDING RING, away fast, showed good speed and held on gamely. CHAIN slipped through on inside in stretch and finished fast. TRANSEN ran a good race, but tired in stretch as if short. MELOY had no mishap.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming prices, $2,000 to $1,500. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:27½. Off at 4:29½. Winner, DeWitt & Page's b. g. THE BAILIFF broke running, raced BARTERING KATE into submission in the first furlong, drew away into long lead, and just kidded with BARTERING KATE through the stretch. BARTERING KATE was hard ridden all the way, but was no match for the winner. TRY FAIR came from far back to take the show. THERON, well up all the way, had no excuse. MINT DE MIE was outrun.

Stocks Crawl Higher Under Quiet Trading

Some Pivotal Issues Lose As Sales Decline to 1,305,040 Shares.

New York, March 13 (AP).—With the bond average making a new high for the year, stocks maintained a fairly even keel today. Trading was still quiet, as the volume of 1,305,040 shares plainly showed, but the list finished a little higher on balance notwithstanding late declines by a number of "pivotal" issues.

Rail and aircraft equities proved to be the most consistent gainers. Most domestic carriers were up fractions to more than a point, while several aviations displayed considerable firmness.

Motors sagged on the eve of the labor hearings, but casualties were not particularly striking.

Utilities Rise Checked.

Utilities had an early rise which failed to get very far. Favored specialties included Atlas Tack, Hercules and Atlas Powder shares, Cluett Peabody, American Locomotive and Maytag.

American Can, American Telephone, U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Montgomery Ward, Case and Bethlehem Steel lost fractions to something over a point.

Passage of the bonus bill by the House was not viewed as much of a factor, probably because traders thought the measure had little, if any, chance of reaching the statute books. Market influences were more or less familiar, including the prospects of revisions in the exchange regulation bill. Trade reports made small contributions to the day's news; car loadings last week apparently held rather close to the previous week. United Fruit's extra dividend, voted late yesterday, was accompanied by a rise in the stock, but International Nickel's good 1933 earnings statement had been discounted.

Demand for Carriers.

The improved demand for carrier stocks was seen as a favorable symptom. In some quarters the firmness was attributed partly to the Eastman report's recommendations for regulation of competing forms of transportation, notably buses and motor trucks. Those who bought the utilities may have been prompted by reports that the St. Lawrence waterway treaty was likely to be defeated and also that proposed New York State legislation in the light and power company field might be modified.

At present there is considerable conjecture with regard to the Treasury's next financing; some wonder if a moderately long-term issue will be tried.

American Metal Market says the automobile industry has curtailed its steel specifications. The decrease, the review believes, may be only temporary, as producers await the outcome of conferences on labor matters. Demand for steel from other sources "shows no material recession, while there is an increase in rail releases."

Auto Production Increases.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Current Business Reports Make Favorable Showing; Comparison With a Year Ago Involves an Unnecessary and Unjustified Distortion.

By Ralph West Robey.

Among those who follow business news only casually, some of the reports of the last few weeks must have caused questioning. The reports have been not only almost unanimously favorable but so good that it must appear strange that we could have had such an improvement and still be so worried about unemployment, substitutes for CWA, &c. The reason for this apparent difference between the pick-up of business and the actual situation now existing, however, is quite simple. It is the result of the practice of comparing current figures with those of a year ago. Under more normal conditions such a comparison is a convenient and reasonably accurate way for showing what is happening. At present it is highly unsatisfactory.

The reason for this is that a year ago business activity in the United States was at about as near a standstill as it positively could be in a highly developed economy. All of our banks were closed, with the result that all trade was under a severe handicap. The only medium of exchange we had was such currency as was in the hands of the public, plus such lines of credit as could be established with sellers. The net effect, of course, was a situation that was artificial and necessarily temporary, for had we been unable to return to the use of checking accounts, we more or less immediately would have devised some other method for giving us a means for conducting business on a more normal scale.

Artificial Conditions Started Before March 4.

To some extent this temporary and artificial condition prevailed for some little time before March 4. Especially was this the case from the start of the Michigan bank holiday on February 12. That action started a deflationary chain of events that quickly was felt from one end of the country to the other. In a few days, too, other States began to follow the lead of Michigan in the declaration of holidays. For some time before March 4, thus, business was being subjected to an utterly abnormal deflationary force.

The period, in consequence, is not suitable as a base from which to measure improvement. This is true for both prices and business activity. From the point of view of any reasonable conception of our basic economic position the situation prevailing at the end of February and the first of March last year is comparable to the condition existing in a street vegetable market on a Saturday night. The produce can not be kept over the week-end and consequently is thrown on the market for anything it will bring, the alternative being complete loss. Certainly no one would maintain that these prices correctly reflect the condition of the market, or that the following Monday one would be justified in using these as a base from which to calculate the improvement that had occurred in prices.

Comparison With Year Ago Amounts to the Same Thing.

Yet, in effect, those who compare price or business data of today with those of a year ago are guilty of such an error. The practice is all the more difficult to understand because it is quite unnecessary in order to show improvement.

In other words, business reports today make a thoroughly favorable showing without such a distortion. Further, they have been favorable for some months. After the July break of last year there was a more or less continuous decline until the middle of November, but since then the trend constantly has been upward. Just what it amounts to in percentages depends upon the particular index of business activity one uses—whether it is weighted more heavily with production goods or consumption goods. It probably is conservative, nevertheless, to say that the improvement has been at least 10 per cent, and in many lines substantially more.

In the face of this there can be no possible justification for trying to "dress up" the figures still more by presenting them as so and so much above a year ago. To do so merely lays the foundation for later troubles through the public becoming increasingly distrustful of business reports.

Bonds Drive To New High in Buoyant Sales

Market Is Optimistic as Turnover Rises to $17,464,000.

New York, March 13 (AP).—Sentiment in the bond market continued highly optimistic today and many issues, including several United States Governments, established new highs for the past two years or more.

Increased demand for both prime investment and secondary loans expanded the turnover to $17,464,000, par value, against $15,538,000 yesterday.

The average for 60 domestic corporate maturities advanced two-tenths of a point to 85.2, a new 1933-34 peak.

Federal Loans Hesitant.

Federal obligations were a little hesitant at the start, in view of the sweeping approval in the House of the soldiers' bonus measure, but they rallied substantially later when the consensus seemed to be that the proposed disbursement of some $2,400,000,000 would be halted by the Senate. The President has already announced he would veto the bill if it reaches him.

All of the listed Government loans finished with gains ranging from 2-32 to 9-32 of a point. Transfers in this department, however, dropped from a total of about $2,300,000 in the previous session to around $1,800,000.

The utilities probably made the best showing among the corporation groups.

Gains of 1 to 2 or more points were held by issues of American & Foreign Power, Delaware Power, New Orleans Public Service, International Hydro-Electric, International Telephone, North American, North American Edison and Utilities Power & Light.

Some of the power bonds were aided by reports that the proposed St. Lawrence waterway legislation would encounter hard going in Congress.

Among the better rails and industrials, up a point or more, were issues of Warner Bros., Wabash, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Paramount, Louisville & Nashville, Loew's, Kresge Foundation, McKesson, Nickle Plate, Erie and Allegheny Corporation.

The foreign section was rather quiet and fractional changes predominated. The Germans, however, were again heavy as the Reich authorities indicated they would ask for further reductions in external interest payments.

Curb Records Better Prices In Specialties

Other Groups Hesitate as Sales Total Rises to 272,000 Shares.

New York, March 13 (AP).—Specialties made further progress on the curb market today, but other groups hesitated. Metals were a bit irregular. Utilities generally improved. Trading was quiet throughout the day.

Davenport Hosiery rose 4½ points while Interstate Hosiery advanced a point. Other specialty gains of around a point or so included Celluloid Corporation, J. J. Newberry, Mead Johnson, Schiff Co., General Tire & Rubber and Sherwin Williams.

Gulf Oil was firm, but Hiram Walker and Newmont Mining yielded around a point each. Standard Oil of Indiana eased a small fraction.

DuPont's 30-Year Bonus Plan Voted

Wilmington, Del., March 13 (AP). The stockholders of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., in annual meeting today, approved the company's 30-year bonus plan as it has been administered heretofore, and sanctioned some changes, recommended by the board of directors, made necessary because of requirements of the new National securities act.

It was decided to resubmit the question of owner-management through the award of bonuses because of recent criticism of bonus plans in general.

The directors were reelected. Henry Belin du Pont was added to the board to fill the vacancy caused by the death of William Coyne. The stockholders approved the retirement of 17,387½ shares of voting debenture stock, all of which is in the treasury of the company. The shares are the last of an authorized issue of 100,000, and as a result of their retirement it was voted to reduce the company's capital stock by $10,000,000, which this authorized issue represented.

Peoples Drug Profit Rises To $643,589

United Fruit Votes Extra and Regular Dividends on Shares.

New York, March 13 (AP).—Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., reports 1933 net profit of $643,589, equal after preferred dividends to $4.27 a common share, against $511,795 or $2.99 a share on a slightly larger amount of stock in 1932.

Directors of United Fruit Co. today declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share and the regular quarterly disbursement of the same amount, both payable April 14 to stock of record March 22.

The statement of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad filed with the New York State Public Service Commission as of December 31 last shows profit and loss surplus of $58,538,797 compared with $61,976,978 at the end of 1932.

A Chicago dispatch to Dow, Jones & Co. says it is understoood Montgomery Ward & Co. will probably show a net income of between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 for the year ended January 31, adding that the total will most likely be nearer the lower figure. This would be the company's first net income since 1930 when profit totaled $423,211.

Drastic reductions in rates for electricity and natural gas ordered by some municipalities have aggravated the decline in the net earnings of the Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation, said Philip G. Gossler, president, in the corporation's 1933 annual report.

The downward trend in earnings during the year, he said, was caused by increased taxes and operating expenses, which "more than offset the improvement in revenues resulting from the slight increase in business which has been evidenced in the past few months."

As shown in the corporation's preliminary statement, 1933 net income amounted to $12,496,759, equivalent, after preferred dividends, to 51 cents a share on the common stock, against $17,204,675 in 1932, or 96 cents a share.

The annual report of the International Nickel Co. of Canada shows net profit in 1933 of $9,662,583 after all charges, including depreciation and mine depletion, equal to 53 cents a common share, after provision for preferred dividends.

In addition, profit accruing from exchange adjustments amounted to $1,739,617, which was carried to the contingent fund. In 1932 the company had a net loss of $135,344, which included exchange losses.

San Francisco, March 13 (AP). Transamerica Corporation reported today a gain of 42.32 per cent in net profits for 1933 over 1932. The net was $11,339,639 for Transamerica, holding companies and all subsidiaries, compared with $7,967,256 in 1932.

Net per share on the 23,681,232 outstanding shares was 48 cents compared with 34 cents on the 23,368,186 shares of stock out in 1932.

The higher earnings reflected "both increased income and the effect of rigid operating economies," the corporation's statement said.

Manila, P. I., March 13 (AP).—Dividends of more than 100 per cent were declared today by the two leading Philippine gold mining companies—Benguet Consolidated and Balatoc.

Last year the two companies took $6,613,288 in gold from their rich mines, an increase of 50 per cent over the preceding year.

C., M., St. P. & P. Line Loads Cut to 23,342

New York, Maroh 13 (AP).—Freight loadings of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific last week totaled 23,342 cars, against 24,311 the previous week and 16,524 a year ago.

The New York, Chicago & St. Louis total loadings last week were 13,201 cars, compared with 8,454 a year ago and 12,630 the previous week. The gain over 1933 was 80.9 per cent.

Cotton Prices Decline Under Southern Sales

March Closes at 12.14 as General Market Drops 1 to 4 Points.

New York, March 13 (AP).—Early advances in cotton today on trade and commission house buying were followed by declines under foreign, local and Southern selling, with the latter becoming slightly more pronounced late in the day.

The market ruled quiet pending further action on the Bankhead cotton-control bill. July contracts sold off from 12.48 to 12.35 and closed at that figure, with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 1 to 4 points.

The highest levels for the day were touched in the first few minutes of trading on overnight buying orders from Wall street, wire and commission houses. Initial levels were 5 to 8 points higher and prices worked up about a point further before selling orders appeared.

Liverpool and Bombay interests were credited with selling here on differences and there were also offerings from local and Southern sources on the advance of about $1 a bale from the low levels of last Saturday.

The House resumed consideration of the Bankhead bill around midday, with approximately four more hours of debate scheduled before it could be read for amendments. In the meantime some in the trade were not inclined to make fresh commitments.

Exports today, 21,002, making 5,846,649 so far this season. Port receipts, 16,212. United States port stocks, 3,255,652.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil today advanced 5 to 6 points early, on covering promoted by the large February consumption figures, but eased off under increased liquidation of May and September, closing net unchanged to 2 points higher. The February consumption was estimated at 256,000 barrels, against 248,000 in January and 178,000 in February last year. The visible supply decreased to 2,942,000 barrels at the end of February. Sales were 70 contracts; bleachable spot, nominal; March, closed 5.25; May, 5.42; July, 5.64; September, 5.84; October, 5.85.

Commodities Turn Firmer As Week Ends

New York, March 13.—Some irregularity was visible in commodity markets in the early part of the week, but recoveries in most of the grains, coffee, butter, cotton, rubber, tin and steel scrap brought the Daily Weighted Price Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., to 109.52 for March 8. This was a new peak for the current year and was the highest since July of last year. The latest index compares with 108.16 for the same day of the preceding month, or a gain of 1.36 points. During this time last year the bank holiday disrupted all commodity markets, but on the corresponding day of 1932 the index stood at 81.22.

The following table presents the Dun & Bradstreet Daily Weighted Price Index of 30 basic commodities, compiled from quotations furnished by the United Press, since February 1, 1934, and the corresponding periods of the preceding year. (1930-1932 equal 100):

Dollars Going Begging for Employment

By Claude A. Jagger.

They are begging, it is true, for only the safest, most liquid form of investment, but dollars are willing to work in such a choice form of commercial credit as a bankers' acceptance for the almost ridiculous return of one-fourth of 1 per cent per annum.

Dollars will take a job in prime commercial paper for as little as 1 per cent. But dollars are still cautious, over the country at large. Business men and merchants are still paying 5 and 6 per cent for bank credit dollars.

Confused and Timid.

The fact is that credit dollars are still confused and timid; new banking and security laws have changed the old channels. Business is much better than a year ago, but lenders complain that conditions are still in a state of flux, and it is difficult to find or to judge a good credit risk.

In the meantime, bank deposits are growing, and bankers complain that they can not find profitable employment for their funds. Excess reserves of banks which are members of the Reserve System have risen to the record-breaking total of $1,350,000,000. These reserves are unemployed. They are earning the banks nothing.

Bankers are being scolded for timidity, but they argue that they can not make the sort of loans that will meet with the disapproval of the National bank examiners.

Loan Volume Less.

Reserve member banks in 91 leading cities, according to the weekly statement out today, had total loans outstanding of $8,168,000,000, actually $142,000,000 less than at the time of the banking crisis a year ago.

It is true that this is due to a decline of $264,000,000 in loans against securities, that other loans have been increased $122,000,000, but the net result is a decline in the total.

But during the year the deposits in these banks have increased $2,371,000,000 to a total of $15,891,000,000. A large part of the banking assets are now lodged in U. S. Government securities, the total amounting to $6,278,000,000, up $1,851,000,000 from a year ago. Other securities are held in the aggregate of $2,975,000,000, off $12,000,000 from 12 months previously.

Less Use of Bank Funds.

Use of bank funds in the financing of the construction and capital goods industries through mortgages and bonds remains at an extremely low ebb. Of course, the banking conventions of 1931-33 have taught bankers anew the old rule of correct banking, that funds subject to withdrawal on demand or short notice should not be tied up in long term investments, save those of the most readily marketable type.

But with the offering of new issues to the public virtually at a standstill, banks are not even being called upon to make loans for short terms to finance the flotation of securities.

Hopes are high, however, that with business improving and legislation and Government policies as they affect monetary and credit problems taking more definite form, private credit will soon begin to perform its former functions.

Radio Waves and Ripples

MR. OXLEY is not a man for trifling. He's a Southern gentleman, and very, very conscious of the linguistic deficiencies of native dialects. He would like very much to hear the folks back home speak English one of these days, but he believes very firmly that some of the people who are not helping along what he considers the refining influence of radio are the dialectic comedians.

Mr. Oxley, therefore, is not the man for Jim McGrath, not that you would call McGrath a dialectic comedian, and maybe you wouldn't call him a comedian of any sort, but Jim has been known on his Morning Mail Bag program to twist "vicinity" into something like "vacnity" and get quite a laugh out of it.

That sort of thing to Mr. Oxley is a tragic waste of golden opportunities for getting his people in shape, say, for a trip to the World's Fair at Chicago this summer where they might get lost several times a day and probably would have a hard time making natives understand them. Mr. Oxley wrote McGrath and told him as much.

Rather than deprive his program of one of its brightest spots, McGrath has compromised with Mr. Oxley. Hereafter "vicinity" will be "vicenity," which is almost as funny.

Whitecaps.

WRC—"The Wise Man," a dramatization of the wise words of the ages, 3:15 p. m.; Miriam Hopkins, guest artist with the Troubadours, 9 p. m.; Attorney General Homer S. Cummings addressing the New York County Lawyers Association, 10:30 p. m.

WMAL—Folk Music of the South, 4:45 p. m.; "The Bard of Armagh," "A Fairy Story by the Fire," "The Old Refrain," "A Dream," "As I Went A-walking," John McCormack, 9:30 p. m.; Belle Baker, Donald Novis, Vincent Lopez, 10 p. m.

WJSV—Norma Shearer interviewed by Louella Parsons, Raymond Paige's Orchestra, 1:15 p. m.; "Norah O'Neill" and "The Foggy Dew," Violinist Albert Spalding, 8:30 p. m.; Dick Powell, 10 p. m.

Quite inadvertently, Carlton Smith, WMAL manager, has stumbled across two quite well-known business men who, until the other night, had never made a radio broadcast.

They are B. F. Wilson, jr., of the Wilson Washington Steamship Lines, and Dr. L. G. Higbee, of the Wilson Normal School. They came up for the Civic Forum broadcast and were quite calm throughout the performance.

Which reminds us of the best advice we ever heard given an inexperienced broadcaster. It came from John Mayo, N. B. C. staff announcer here.

A Columbia press release tells of a New Jersey boy who one day made up his mind he'd hop to Mars in a rocket ship just like Buck Rogers.

The department stores being deplorably lacking in rocket ships, he made his own with a few sticks and a couple of old egg crates. Motive power is to be supplied by a package of fire-crackers.

Everything is ready for the hop, and the young adventurer awaits only good flying weather. Three white mice, chosen by him as emissaries to Mars, are sitting around in a cage waiting, too.

Walt Mason, Himself

Balmy Sleep.

The wise man goes to bed at ten, and has all kinds of pleasant dreams, and he is keen for work again, what time the morning whistle screams. He's had a calm and restful night, such comfort as white sheets afford, and has an eager appetite for breakfast, when it's on the board. He eats some 14 buckwheat cakes, the favored diet of the blest, perhaps a brace of sirloin steaks, or sausage, if he likes it best. He swallows coffee by the quart, to follow bowls of luscious prunes, and exercises of this sort inspire a man to warble tunes. While he is rising from his bed, to eat the cakes and things like those, some other chap with aching head is lying down to gain repose. The other chap has spent the night applying red paint to the town, and now, as dawn is glowing bright, he lays his weary carcass down. He'll wake up in the afternoon, or when the shades of evening fall, and vainly try to eat a prune, a doughnut or a codfish ball. The choicest menu can't induce his appetite to rise once more; for sirloin steaks he has no use, and talk of sausage is a bore. The night no doubt was meant for sleep, the day was meant for honest toil, and men who foolish vigils keep don't follow up the rules of Hoyle.

Danville to Seek New Power Plan

City Attorney to Reopen PWA Negotiations.

Danville, Va., March 13 (Spl.).—The city council moved today to reopen Danville's power issue by instructing City Attorney A. M. Aiken to seek a PWA loan more favorable than that recently defeated by 184 votes.

Fifty proponents of the $3,000,000 hydroelectric development waited on the council last night. Spokesmen said the matter had not been properly presented, and that they believed the Government would waive the clause in the old contract which proved a stumbling block, and which virtually placed a Government lien on the city's credit.

State's High Court Ponders Beer Case

Amnesty Clause Claimed to Revoke Conviction.

Richmond, March 13 (AP).—The State Supreme Court today took under advisement a motion to dismiss the prosecution of E. L. Klingstein, convicted in Rockingham County of possessing 3.2 beer prior to the State law legalizing the beverage.

The Rockingham Court fined Klingstein $500 and he appealed. Meanwhile the Virginia Legislature had passed the 3.2 beer act carrying an amnesty clause. The Circuit Court held the case was out of its jurisdiction. Assistant Attorney General Collins Denny today said he was of the opinion that the case constituted a "prosecution" before the Appellate Court and that it was within the high court's power to dismiss it.

University Roster Is Still Declining

West Virginia School Has 144 Fewer Than in 1933.

Morgantown, W. Va., March 13 (Spl.).—Student enrollment at West Virginia University continues the steady decline it has made through the depression, according to Charles T. Neff, jr., secretary of board of governors.

There are now 144 students fewer than last year. The total is 2,184 against 2,328 in 1933, and 2,498 in 1932.

An increase, however, is shown by the graduate school which has 135 students. Sixty of these are in the arts and sciences, 34 in education, 7 in engineering and the rest in other branches. Fifty-three of the graduate students are women.

Court Lightens Driver's Penalty

Staunton, Va., March 13 (Spl.).—Charged with operating an automobile without a permit, John Mays was fined $500 and given 12 months in jail—the maximum penalty—in magistrates court.

Mays appealed immediately to Judge Joseph A. Glasgow, in Augusta Circuit Court, who reduced the fine to $25 and the jail sentence to six months. Mays had a record of three convictions for reckless driving and two for driving while intoxicated.

Traffic Sergt. Robert A. Lynn said that conviction on three charges of reckless driving revokes a driver's license permanently.

Effect on Labor Of NRA Flayed

Discrimination Charged by Richmond Speaker.

Richmond, March 13 (AP).—A. J. Muste, former president of Brookwood Labor College, speaking here yesterday, said that under the National Recovery act employers have been benefited while labor has been discriminated against. He spoke at an industrial conference held at the Y. W. C. A.

Mayor J. Fulmer Bright took issue with Mr. Muste on several points while Dr. S. C. Mitchell, professor of history at the University of Richmond, agreed with several assertions of the speaker.

Criticising the NRA, Muste said company unions are flourishing, but that in crucial cases the National Labor Board is urging striking workers to go back to work. He said that return takes from the worker's hands the only weapon he has—the right to cease working.

50-Year Sentence In Baby's Murder

Botetourt Farmer Guilty; Woman Faces Trial.

Fincastle, Va., March 13 (AP).—A jury in the Boutetourt County Circuit Court last night convicted John Crouch, 35, farmer, of the murder of a newborn infant and recommended a 50-year term in the penitentiary.

Judge Benjamin Haden passed the sentence after overruling a motion to set the verdict aside. The baby's body was found months ago, buried in a peach carton.

Mrs. Martha Crouch, sister-in-law of John Crouch, also is under indictment in the case. Her trial will be held later in the term.

Schultz Is Given 18-Year Sentence

Frederick, Md., March 13 (Spl.).—George F. Schultz, guilty of second-degree murder, was sentenced last night to 18 years in the penitentiary. He shot Miss Bessie C. Darling, 46, proprietress of a summer house at Deerfield, a village in the Catoctin Mountains, October 31.

The State claimed Schulte had been courting Miss Darling and was jealous of attentions she received from a neighbor. Miss Mazie Willard, maid at the boarding house and only witness of the shooting, said Schulte forced Miss Darling's door, and after killing her and drinking a cup of coffee, shot himself.

Special Bank Plan Backed By Roosevelt

Reserve Board Estimates Million New Jobs Are Possible.

(Associated Press.)

Potential employment of possibly a million workers in the heavy industries has inclined the Administration to a "favorable" attitude on Federal Reserve Board plans for a special system of industrial banks.

This word was brought from the White House yesterday by Secretary Morgenthau and Gov. Eugene Black of the Reserve Board, who advanced the project for a new banking chain to supply capital funds to small industries.

"I am convinced there is a need for this kind of financing," Morgenthau said. "Mr. Roosevelt is ready to ask Congress for the necessary legislation when the plan is completed."

Black estimated roughly that a survey by the 12 Reserve banks indicated some 500,000 to 1,000,000 men would gain employment if long-term credit were made available.

Survey Still in Progress.

"The plan will set up a source of capital credit never before available, and it will take commercial banks out of a loan field in which they never properly belonged," Black said.

Morgenthau and Black visited the White House to submit their program for a final decision. Reserve Board experts still are tabulating the survey on long-term industrial credit needs and the employment which would result from an adequate supply.

Black said the Reserve Board had not finished the draft of legislation which would be needed. The plan contemplates an industrial bank in each Federal Reserve Bank, under the direction of the Reserve Board.

The figure of $300,000,000 has been mentioned, but Black said there was no agreement. It was thought likely the Government would subscribe the capital, possibly through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The industrial banks would discount paper of the five-year type which is not ordinarily acceptable at Reserve Banks. Under Black's plan they also would be authorized to make direct loans in special cases. Where such loans were direct, it is believed private banks would be offered participation.

There also is a strong Reserve Board sentiment for relaxing the securities act, to encourage capital issues and for preventing the stock exchange control bill from increasing the difficulty of floating capital loans.

Hope of Reconciliation Halts Pickford Divorce

Hollywood, March 13 (AP).—The reported reconciliation between Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks gained further credence here today when Loyd Wright, Miss Pickford's attorney, admitted there had been no attempt on his part to publish the summons in her divorce suit.

The summons, essential before the suit could be tried, was not published, Wright said, because Miss Pickford had failed to sign the necessary papers before her departure for the East, where she is preserving silence on the reconciliation question along with her husband, who is in England.

Insull Suicide Effort Feared

Former Utilities Magnate May Surrender to U. S.; Yielding to Pleas.

His wife, constantly with him in the past depressing weeks of his fight against being returned to the United States to face charges of fraud, ordered all instruments and drugs removed from their apartment. Windows were kept closed and some one remained with the utilities operator at all times.

Immediately rumors sprang up as to where Insull would go when he leaves, possibly on Thursday. Mrs. Insull was represented as urging her husband voluntarily to surrender to the United States authorities for return to face trial, arguing they might be more lenient with him than if he is taken by force.
